Introduction

February 2025

Marietta House Museum located in Glenn Dale, Maryland, is the former home and tobacco plantation of Gabriel Duvall (1752-1844), a U.S. Supreme Court Justice and enslaver. The site highlights the relationships among the enslaved people and their enslavers that were shaped in part by the nation's founding documents and local slave codes.

To enhance interpretation, Marietta staff conducted extensive research on the individuals enslaved by generations of Duvall family members in Maryland. Marietta also contracted a company called Slavery Inventory Database (or SID) to conduct property tax and probate records research. A custom Access database was developed which provides details of enslaved individuals' names, ages, dates of birth and death (if known), enslavers (including local non-Duvall family members), occupations, family relationships, significant life events (self-emancipation, marriage, childbirth, tax assessments, enumerations, military service, etc.), and the sources used to compile this information.

While the digital (searchable) database is available at Marietta House Museum's research library, the following document is a PDF copy of the information contained within the database to serve as a reference resource. The information is organized alphabetically by first name of the enslaved individual and includes an index to the appropriate page numbers.

We believe the details of the historically enslaved families and individuals at Marietta in Prince George's County, surrounding counties in Maryland and Virginia, and the District of Columbia, will be valuable to individuals looking for familial information, professional or amateur genealogists, and anyone interested in researching Black or local history.

Terminology

- Slavery Inventory Database (SID): The initials ‘SID’ appear throughout the database. SID refers to the company that was contracted by Marietta House Museum to research primary sources, uncovering as much as possible about the lives of the enslaved individuals held at the Old Mansion / Wigwam (aka Darnall’s Grove) and Marietta. Their research populates much of the database.
- SID ID: SID assigned unique identifiers to the enslaved population, non-enslaved employees, enslavers, and relatives of enslaved people. Additional SID IDs have been assigned by Marietta staff since then.
- ‘Marietta Associated’ checkbox: Originally the ‘Marietta Associated’ checkbox was meant for individuals enslaved at Marietta only. However, Marietta House wanted to expand the parameters of the database to include enslavements at the Old Mansion / Wigwam (aka Darnall’s Grove), Mareen Duvall’s Middle Plantation, prior sites of enslavement for Marietta enslaved individuals, and family members / descendants of these enslaved individuals. Therefore, the ‘Marietta Associated’ checkbox evolved to mean:
 - ‘Marietta Associated’: Checking the ‘Marietta Associated’ box means the individual was enslaved at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) OR at Marietta.
 - ‘Marietta Unassociated’: Leaving the ‘Marietta Associated’ box unchecked means the individual enslaved at a site other than the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) or Marietta OR the individual was a free person of color related to an enslaved person. These names will appear in red type in the database.
- Free People of Color: The initial design (and still the major portion) of the database was for enslaved individuals only. However, this expanded later on so that we could include free people of color who were related to and/or descended from enslaved individuals. We had to develop a workaround to identify these free people, thus we follow these guidelines:
 - Free people of color that were family members / descendants of ‘Marietta Associated’ individuals DO NOT get a check mark as they were not enslaved. These names will appear in red type in the database.
- Duval/Duvall Spelling: The last name Duvall has been spelled numerous ways by descendants (Duvall, Du Val, Duval). To be consistent, for Gabriel Duvall’s generation and earlier, we have used ‘Duvall.’ For the generation beginning with Gabriel’s son Edmund B. Duval, Sr., we have used ‘Duval.’

- Inclusive Description: In keeping with the Society of American Archivists' (SAA) commitment to inclusive description, we have focused on using respectful terminology and preserving the humanity of formerly enslaved people within the database records. Some examples of this are:
 - SID research documents used the word 'unnamed' (e.g. 'Unnamed Child of Kate') to refer to people whose names were unknown. As naming conventions are very important in African society, and enslaved individuals had names whether the historical documents record them or not, we have removed 'unnamed' (e.g. 'Child of Kate') and include the words 'name unknown' when referring to such persons.
 - Although enslavers dehumanized their enslaved people by treating them as property, we have been conscious of how we quote the historical record. The record may state 'Thomas -- $250,' which many people write as 'Thomas, valued at $250.' However, we chose to specifically state this was Thomas's monetary value (with 'value' in quotes), to clarify this was not his value as a person. In these instances, we have used the following language: Thomas, whose monetary 'value' was $250...
 - In the time of enslavement derogatory words to describe Black people were commonly used. We have avoided using these words through rephrasing. When we have directly quoted from an historical source that uses such wording, we have included the word followed by '[sic]' to indicate that this was a direct quote.
 - Other deliberate choices in wording include the following:
 - 'Enslaved' rather than 'slave'
 - 'Enslaver' rather than 'slaveholder'
 - 'Enslaved by' rather than 'owned by'
 - Capitalizing the 'B' in 'Black' – e.g. 'Black person'

Report: Enslaved Individual

Aaron [Unknown] (GD1531)

Marietta Associated: ☐ Leaving the "Marietta Associated" box unchecked means this individual was enslaved at a site other than the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) or Marietta OR was free person of color.

Name: Aaron [Unknown] (GD1531)

Gender: Male

Religion:

Date of Birth: ☒ ca? 1792

Place of Birth: likely Annapolis, Anne Arundel County, MD

Date of Death: ☐ ?

Place of Death:

Race: Black

Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics: Height: 5' 4"

Biographical Narrative: Aaron was raised in Annapolis, where his father also resided. His father was enslaved by Mrs. Carroll of Annapolis, and Aaron may also have been enslaved by her, but there is no evidence proving that at this time. Mrs. Carroll moved to Baltimore prior to 1815 and may have brought Aaron's father with her. At some point (likely 1790s, when Gabriel Duvall was living in Annapolis), Aaron was purchased by Gabriel Duvall, who later sold Aaron to his cousin Grafton Duvall. On May 27, 1815, Aaron self-emancipated, an act Grafton claimed was "not a premeditated act" and was caused by "the threatening of a slave belonging to another person." Grafton states Aaron might have headed to Prince George's County or Baltimore. No known, available records were located for Aaron after he self-emancipated. Further research is necessary to determine if he was re-enslaved by Grafton Duvall.

Enslaver Name	ca?	Enslavement Date	Notes
Duvall, Grafton (GrD)	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	1815 (before)	By 1815, Aaron was held by his third enslaver Grafton Duvall, a cousin of Gabriel Duvall. There were no extant documents that recorded the transfer of Aaron from his enslaver Judge Gabriel Duvall to his enslaver Grafton Duvall.
Duvall, Gabriel, 12/6/1752 to 4/2/1844 (GD)	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	after 1793	At this time, no documents have been located that show the transfer of Aaron from his former enslaver (possibly the Mrs. Carroll who enslaved his father) to his new enslaver Gabriel Duvall. That transfer likely took place when Gabriel Duvall was residing in Annapolis, Maryland during the late 1790s.

Relation Name	Certainty	Relationship Type	Notes
[Father of Aaron] [Name Unknown] (FA)	Known	Parent	Aaron's father was enslaved by Mrs. Carroll of Annapolis, MD at least since 1815 and likely earlier. Mrs. Carroll later moved to Baltimore and may have taken Aaron's father with her.

Description:	According to a runaway advertisement placed in the paper when Aaron self-emancipated, he was approximately 23 years old. Therefore, he was born circa 1792. It's unknown whether he was born into slavery and where he was born, but it's possible he was born in Annapolis where his father was enslaved by Mrs. Carroll.

Description:	It's unknown at which location Gabriel Duvall enslaved Aaron as we don't know when Gabriel enslaved him. If prior to 1800, he was likely held captive at Annapolis or at the Old Mansion/Wigwam. He may have been at Marietta for a short time depending upon when Gabriel Duvall sold Aaron to Grafton Duvall.

Description: "Fifty Dollars Reward, Will be paid by the subscriber for the apprehension of negro [sic] AARON, who ran away on Saturday evening, the 27th instant. He is a low, square and chunky built fellow, about 23 years of age and about 5 feet 4 inches high, with small eyes, thick lips, large hands and feet; and is an artful fellow- His clothing when he left home was old and much worn, of homemade cloth; and as I have reason to believe he was driven away through the fear of an unjust accusation by a fellow having a wife at my house, I believe that it was not a premeditated act and that he has not changed his clothing; as he has absented himself without any cause from my overseer or myself, but thro' the threatening of a slave belonging to another person, I will look over this offence, provided he returns immediately to his duty. Aaron was raised in Annapolis, and has a father there, belonging to Mrs. Carroll, and as she has removed to Baltimore, it is likely his father was also taken to that place. He was purchased by me from Judge Duvall late of Washington city, but now residing in Prince George's county, where his relations are. He will probably make for one or other of these places. If taken in this county, I will give ten dollars, if out of the county and in the state or in the District of Columbia, 25 dollars, and if out of the state, the above reward, upon his being secured in jail, so that I get him again, and reasonable additional charges, if brought home. GRAFTON DUVALL June 3."

Notes: In 1815, Aaron escaped from his third enslaver, Grafton Duvall. This was potentially prompted by an accusation of adultery.

Biographical Narrative: Adam was sold by Cornelius Coningham to Gabriel Duvall in 1810. While the sale took place in Washington, D. C., there is no evidence to confirm or deny whether Adam was originally from there. Adam was about 48 years old at the time of the sale. Adam does not appear on Gabriel Duvall's 1833 Personal Property Tax, which listed all of his enslaved persons by their first name. This likely means he either died, was sold, or self-emancipated prior to 1833.

Biographical Narrative: Agness was either born at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) or was purchased later by Gabriel Duvall. Gabriel's tax records since 1802 do reflect enslaved individuals (names unknown) who might match Agness's life trajectory at the Old Mansion/Wigwam and Marietta. Agness was first identified by name in Gabriel's 1833 Personal Property Tax record, where she was listed as an adult female, likely between the ages of 14-36. In his 1838 will, Gabriel bequeathed Agness to his grandson Edmund B. Duval, Jr., but later changed the bequest to his grandson Marcus Duval in his 1840 will. We know Agness gave birth to a boy named Will circa 1844. In 1860, no individual matching Agness's age, gender, and monetary "value" could be identified in the enslaved holdings for Marcus Duval. It is unknown whether Agness had died, been sold or hired out, or had self-emancipated prior to 1860. There are no known, available records pertaining to Agness by name after the year 1844.

Agness first appears by name in 1833 tax records; however, Gabriel's tax records since 1802 reflect unnamed enslaved individuals who have the potential to match Agness's gender, age, and life's trajectory at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove).

Duval, Marcus, 12/31/1824 to 1873 (MD)

☒ 1844

After the death of Gabriel Duvall, Agness's ownership was transferred to Marcus. No specific mention of Agness is made after 1844, and no individual matching her life trajectory was recorded living at the Old Mansion/Wigwam or Marietta after 1860.

Description:	"Agnes & child Will infant" were assessed together in the 1844 inventory of Gabriel Duvall's estate and "valued" at $150.00. The assessment of Will with his mother points to his very young age. As Will was the child of Agness and was born after the writing of Gabriel Duvall's 1840 will, legally Will was held in bondage by Marcus Duval. Of note, the monetary "value" of $150.00 seems low for both individuals.

Biographical Narrative: SID research indicates Airey was born sometime before 1747 as she likely had two female children born between 1747-69. Airey's freedom status at birth is unknown. Tax records for an enslaved individual (name unknown) whose description matched the life trajectory of Airey indicate she was enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr. at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) between 1783 and 1796. The small scale of Benjamin Duvall, Jr.'s slaveholdings, as well as the age and gender markers of those enslaved recorded in Benjamin Duvall, Jr.'s tax records, has led SID to conclude that the majority of those enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr. were of a single-family unit that consisted of at least four children with their mother and father: Airey, her husband (likely Robin - BDjr19), and their 4 children, likely the following: Female (BDjr3), Female (BDjr4), Kate (BDjr26), Ruth (DD1). In Duvall's will, he bequeathed to his wife several enslaved people, but Airey and Robin were not included, because they were most likely designated to become enslaved by Gabriel Duvall. There are no known records of Airey after 1796 so she may have died, been sold or hired out, or self-emancipated.

Biographical Narrative: Thomas Butler, his wife Sarah Butler, and their children Lydia, Jane, and Sally were enslaved by John Dells (or Dales) some time prior to 1799. At various times from 1799-1805, the Butler family lived with Dells in Maryland, Virginia, and the Georgetown neighborhood in Washington, D.C. Dells hired out Thomas and Sarah to Thomas Gossum in Virginia and to Christian Getzendanner in Georgetown. Around 1805 or earlier, Dells sold Thomas and Sarah's children Lydia and Jane away from the family. No record of their sale or their new enslaver has been located. According to witness Matthew Kennedy, in the spring of 1805, Dells and Duvall met in Gabriel's Washington City office and the sale of Thomas, Sarah, and Sally to Duvall was agreed upon. Then Duvall and Dells met at William Duvall's in Georgetown where the sale was finalized, Thomas and Sarah having agreed to the transfer. This would have occurred on May 29 or 30, 1805. Duvall sent Thomas, Sarah, and Sally to Prince George's County to work. This was prior to the building of Marietta, so the Butlers likely lived and labored at the Old Mansion at first. Prior to 1828, Thomas and Sarah had additional children named Matilda, Airy, and Reason. They also had two grandchildren named Liddy and Eliza. It is not clear which of their children was the parent of Liddy and Eliza.

Fearful that Duvall was planning to sell them, in 1828 all eight members of the Butler family petitioned the D.C. circuit court for their freedom. One of their attorneys was Francis Scott Key. The case centered around whether John Dells had imported the Butlers from Virginia or D.C. in 1805 with the intent to sell them, which would be a violation of the 1796 Maryland Act. Gabriel Duvall stated he did not intend to sell the Butlers and that the case should be tried in a Maryland court, perhaps believing he could obtain a more favorable verdict in his home state. The court declined to change the venue, and decided, in fact, that John Dells did violate the non-importation clause. The Butlers were granted their freedom in 1831. More research needs to be performed in the hopes of identifying the location of Airy Butler after the year 1831.

Biographical Narrative: Amelia was born on March 2, 1833 at Marietta. She was born into enslavement as her mother Serena had been enslaved by Edmund B. Duval, Sr. until his death in 1831. Edmund's wife Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval selected Serena as part of her dower's thirds, becoming Serena's new enslaver. Upon Augusta's death in 1832, Serena and all of her future children (including Amelia) were inherited by Edmund and Augusta's daughter Mary Frances Duval. Amelia's siblings (Serena's other children) were Rachel, Seneca, Edward, Cary, and Randolph. She also had a niece named Emily who was Rachel's daughter. Although Amelia was never referred to as Amelia Jackson, we believe she potentially shared the same last name as those believed to have been her siblings. After the death of Augusta in 1832, Mary Frances's grandfather Gabriel Duvall acted as the orphaned child's guardian and managed the financial affairs of her estate, and the lives of those she enslaved, until Mary Frances reached her majority. Gabriel hired out his grandchildren's enslaved individuals, including Amelia's mother Serena, using her labor at Marietta and compensating Mary Frances's estate. Gabriel Duvall's account book for the years 1838-42 records the labor of Serena and notes the maintenance of her young children. It is most likely that young Amelia remained with Serena during this period, being too young to perform hireable labor for Gabriel Duvall. Mary Frances Duval moved to Virginia after the death of her grandfather Gabriel and was taxed in the city of Norfolk from 1847-49 for one enslaved person over the age of 12 years, but not over the age of 16 years. Amelia's age during this period fell into that range and it's possible she was in Norfolk with Mary Frances. At this time, no other records documenting Amelia's life have been found.

Description: In March 1833, Gabriel Duvall recorded a payment of $2.00 to a midwife for Amelia's mother Serena. He later recorded Amelia's birth date as March 2, 1833. Considered one of Serena's future children, Amelia was born enslaved by Mary Frances Duval according to the will of Mary Frances's mother Augusta Carolina McCausland Duval. Within his grandchildren's estate account, Gabriel Duvall confirmed that Mary Frances was Amelia's enslaver.

Additional Information

Edmund B. Duval, Sr. died intestate in 1831. The administration of Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s estate fell to his father, Gabriel Duvall. By law, Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s widow, Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, inherited her chosen one-third (her dower) of his enslaved persons. Augusta C. McCausland Duval died in October of 1832. At that time, the enslaved of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. and Augusta C. McCausland Duval were bequeathed to their four living children: Marcus Du Val, Edmund B. Duval, Jr., Mary Frances Duval, Gabriella Augusta Duval. Gabriel Duvall, grandfather of the said four heirs, was the manager and guardian of all their inherited enslaved persons until the four heirs reached their majorities. Documentation of Gabriel Duvall's personal accounts for the grandchildren survived and provided a fuller account of this group of enslaved individuals. Although there is evidence of enslaved ownership by Edmund B. Duval, Sr. that dated back to 1818, our only current understanding of the specifically named enslaved individuals of his estate is from 1831. We have no information at this time of their origins prior to their enslavement by Edmund B. Duval, Sr.

Currently, we have found no record of the enslaved of Marietta having come from the family of Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval. Augusta's father, Marcus McCausland, was recorded on the 1820 U.S. Federal Census as having five enslaved individuals in Baltimore County, Maryland. Marcus McCausland died in 1828 leaving everything to his wife and executrix, Mary Ann McCausland. The inventory of Marcus McCausland's estate recorded no enslaved. Mary Ann McCausland was recorded with no enslaved on the 1830 U.S. Federal Census. We have currently found no record of the whereabouts of those five enslaved individuals that were enumerated in 1820. No deed of purchase or deed of gift transferring ownership of an enslaved individual from the McCauslands to the Duvals was located.

Biographical Narrative: Amelia Duckett was enslaved by Gabriel Duvall at Marietta. Although Amelia isn't listed by name on Gabriel's tax records until 1833, the tax records reflect an individual (name unknown) with a similar life trajectory to Amelia's at the Old Mansion / Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) and later Marietta since 1815. Amelia married a man named Jacob Duckett, who was also enslaved by Gabriel Duvall. Their children were: Elizabeth, Martha, Benjamin, Isaiah, Elias, Jane, Hezekiah, Eley, Margaret Ann. Most, if not all, the children were likely born into enslavement at Marietta. A census record lists Amelia as 65 years old in 1880, which would mean she was born in 1815. However, she was likely born before 1815 as she gave birth to Martha in 1829 and would have only been 14 years old. More improbably, she gave birth to Elizabeth prior to 1829 and would have been less than 14 years old. Therefore, we've listed Amelia's birth date as circa 1810-15.

In his 1838 and 1840 wills, Gabriel bequeathed Amelia to his grandson Marcus Duval, and Marcus became Amelia's new enslaver in 1844 after Gabriel's death. Marcus took control of the Old Mansion / Wigwam property when he reached his majority in 1845, and Amelia and her family likely moved from Marietta to Wigwam.

After emancipation, city directory listings for Washington, D.C. from 1867-79 (not inclusive) show Jacob Duckett residing there, and Amelia most likely was with him. In 1867, Amelia's and Jacob's daughter Margaret Ann married Calphus Brown (son of Everlina), who was also previously enslaved by the Duvalls. Their children William Brown and Elias Brown were Amelia's grandchildren. Amelia's and Jacob's son Hezekiah married a woman named Rebecca, and their children Eliza, Edward, and Joseph were Amelia's grandchildren as well. Amelia and her family appear in the 1880 census in Washington, D.C., where she was working as a servant. There are no known, available records pertaining to Amelia Duckett after 1880.

Description: Upon Gabriel's death, Marcus Duval became Amelia's new enslaver. Marcus Duval reached his majority in December of 1845 and took control of the estate he received from his father Edmund B. Duval, Sr., his mother Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, and his grandfather Gabriel Duvall. This included the northern half of the larger Marietta plantation that became known as Wigwam. Amelia would have lived and labored at Wigwam.
Notes: Likely relocated to Wigwam between 1844-45.

Description: Amelia Duckett and her family were enumerated in the 1880 U.S. Federal Census in the District of Columbia at 428 Ridge Street NW. She was recorded as a 65-year-old servant named "Emelia." Also in the residence were her husband Jacob, an 80-year-old laborer, her daughter Margaret Duckett Brown, and her two grandsons, William Brown and Elias Brown.

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Brown (born August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912) come through the ca. 1908 marriage of Calphus and Margaret's son William A. Brown to a woman named Louise (Lizie).

Date of Birth: ☒ ca? 1819-25

Place of Birth: Likely at Marietta, Prince George's County, MD

Date of Death: ☐

Place of Death:

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Amelia was enslaved by Gabriel Duvall at Marietta and was likely born into slavery around 1819-25. She first appears by name in Gabriel's 1833 Personal Property Tax records; however, since 1819, Gabriel Duvall's tax records reflect enslaved individuals (names unknown) with the potential to match Amelia's gender, age, and life's trajectory. Gabriel bequeathed Amelia to his granddaughter Mary Frances Duval in his 1838 will, but changed his mind and bequeathed Amelia to his grandson Edmund B. Duval, Jr. in his 1840 will. Edmund became Amelia's new enslaver upon Gabriel's death in 1844. At the time of Gabriel's death, "Mily [Amelia] & child Sarah Jane" were assessed together in the estate inventory, meaning Sarah Jane was likely very young. Additionally, based on the order of names and organization of individuals according to their age and assessed monetary "values," it is likely that William Thomas was a child of Amelia. As Sarah Jane and William Thomas were children of Amelia, their new enslaver would also have been Edmund. After 1844, an individual (name unknown) matching William Thomas's life trajectory can be found in Edmund's enslavements; however, no individuals matching Amelia's or Sarah Jane's age, gender and monetary "value" can be identified. It is possible that Amelia and Sarah Jane were either sold, died, self-emancipated, or had been hired out.

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Gabriel Duvall's enslaved cook Maria was likely the mother of Anne Celestia, based upon the order of names and organization of individuals in Gabriel's 1833 tax list. As Maria was likely enslaved by Gabriel Duvall at the time of Anne Celestia's birth around 1831-33, Anne Celestia would have been born into enslavement at Marietta. She is first identified by name in 1833, but enslaved individuals with the potential to match Anne Celestia's age, gender, and life's trajectory appear in Gabriel's tax records since 1831. Anne Celestia likely had a sister named Araminta, as Araminta was Maria's daughter, born circa 1825-33. At a young age, Anne Celestia lost her mother Maria, as an 1836 letter written by Gabriel Duvall states that Maria had recently died. It appears that a severe illness spread across Marietta that year, as Duvall notes in his letter that other enslaved individuals were also seriously ill. Anne Celestia is not mentioned in Gabriel's 1838 will, and it's not clear why she was omitted. She is not mentioned in his 1840 will either, but based upon Gabriel's instructions that any enslaved individuals not specifically named were to be divided equally between his grandsons Marcus Duval and Edmund Duval, Anne Celestia would have been bequeathed to one of them. After Gabriel Duvall's death, contrary to the intent dictated by his 1840 will, the legal ownership of Anne Celestia was conveyed to Gabriel's granddaughter Gabriella Augusta Duval, instead of Marcus or Edmund. Gabriella's guardian George Washington Duvall would have handled Gabriella's financial dealings and her enslaved individuals as Gabriella was still a minor. Records show that Anne Celestia was hired out from 1846 through 1848 as a "house servant [sic]". Gabriella Augusta Duval was reported still residing at Marietta with her brother Edmund B. Duval, Jr. in the 1850 U.S Federal Census for Prince George's County. It is currently unknown if Anne Celestia remained at Marietta with Gabriella. In 1860, Gabriella Augusta Duval was living with her sister Mary Frances Duval Yeaton's family in Alexandria, Virginia. It is not currently known if Anne Celestia went with Gabriella. According to the 1860 U.S. Federal Census Slave Schedule, Gabriella Augusta Duval, was the enslaver of one 40-year-old Black woman. This enslaved woman was hired out to Jane Dade of Alexandria. Due to the extreme age difference, it is unlikely that said 40-year-old enslaved woman was Anne Celestia. There are no known, available records pertaining to Anne Celestia by name after the year 1848.

I have lost Maria, my cook, which is a serious loss, as I have not one fit to be employed in that capacity, and others of my people are seriously indisposed. G. Duvall, Marietta." Maria's cause of death was unknown, but it appears that a severe illness had spread across Marietta in 1836. Gabriel Duvall noted that other individuals in his enslaved holdings were seriously ill at that time.

Description:	Anne Celestia was not identified in Gabriel Duvall's 1838. It is not clear why she was omitted. She also was not identified in Gabriel's 1840 will, but the verbiage of Gabriel Duvall's 1840 will instructed his grandsons to divide between themselves "equally all the remainder of my slaves with their future increase [sic]..." Because Anne Celestia was not identified by name in the will, she most likely would have been bequeathed to either Marcus Duval or Edmund B. Duval, Jr. However, contrary to the intent dictated by his 1840 will, after Gabriel's death the legal ownership of Anne Celestia was conveyed to his granddaughter Gabriella Augusta Duval instead of Marcus or Edmund. As Gabriella was still a minor, her guardian George Washington Duvall was in charge of all her financial dealings, including her enslaved individuals.

Biographical Narrative: As her mother Maria was likely enslaved by Gabriel Duvall at the time of Araminta's birth, Araminta was likely born into enslavement at Marietta around 1825-33. She is first identified by name in 1833, but enslaved individuals with the potential to match Araminta's age, gender, and life's trajectory appears in Gabriel's tax records since 1825. Araminta likely had a sister named Anne Celestia, as Anne Celestia was likely Maria's daughter, born circa 1831-33. At a young age, Araminta lost her mother Maria. An 1836 letter written by Gabriel Duvall states that Maria was his cook and had recently died. It appears that a severe illness spread across Marietta that year, as Duvall notes in his letter that other enslaved individuals were also seriously ill. The relationship between Araminta and Maria is confirmed in Gabriel Duvall's 1838 will bequeathing "Minta, daughter of Maria" to his granddaughter Mary Frances Duval. Gabriel again bequeathed Araminta to Mary Frances in his 1840 will. After Gabriel's death in 1844, Mary Frances became Araminta's new enslaver. As Mary Frances had not yet reached her majority, her estate and financial dealings (including individuals enslaved by her) were managed by her guardian John Southgate. There are no known, available records pertaining to Araminta after the year 1844, so it is unclear what happened to her. She may have died, self-emancipated, or been sold.

Date of Death: ☒ 1850-60?

Place of Death:

Biographical Narrative: Arthur was likely born around 1779, although evidence differs regarding an exact birth date. He is listed as over 45 years old in an 1833 tax record, and as 65 years old in both an 1844 inventory and the 1850 U.S. Federal Census. There is no evidence of whether he was born on Duvall property or was purchased later by Gabriel Duvall. There are enslaved individuals (names unknown) with the potential to match Arthur's life trajectory on Duvall properties since 1790. In his 1840 will, Gabriel bequeathed Arthur to his grandson Edmund B. Duval, Jr. (who also inherited Marietta), and Edmund became Arthur's enslaver in 1844 after Gabriel's death. It appears Arthur continued to labor and reside at Marietta. Arthur may have suffered from a hernia when he was about 66 years old, as Gabriel's estate paid for a truss for Arthur in 1845. Due to Arthur's advanced age and the fact that he doesn't appear in Edmund's enslavement records of 1860, he was likely deceased by this time.

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Barbary was born circa 1734-37 into enslavement. Their mother Cate was possibly first enslaved by Mary Duvall Ridgely Henderson's husband Col. Henry Ridgely, as Cate's mother Easter (Rachel's grandmother) was enslaved by him. A one-year-old girl child (name not given) is listed on the estate inventory taken in 1710 after Ridgely's death. Since Cate was born circa 1711, it's possible this girl child is Cate, but this is merely a hypothesis with no other documentation to confirm the theory. Per testimony given in 1800 by Mareen Duvall's two grandsons, Benjamin Duvall and Benjamin "Marsh" Duvall, we know that Cate was enslaved by Mary Duvall Ridgely Henderson's third husband Rev. Jacob Henderson at Catton Plantation in Prince George's County by 1712. Cate's children Rachel and Barbary would most likely have been born between 1734-37 at Catton Plantation (renamed "Belair" in 1721). Benjamin "Marsh" states that Rachel and Barbary's father was a white Irish servant named Patrick Doyle, thus the children were of mixed race. In 1721 Henderson leased Belair and the Hendersons moved away, but sources do not indicate where they lived between 1721-34. By 1735 they lived in Prince George's County near the site of the present-day Holy Trinity Episcopal Church in Bowie, Maryland. There are no extant sources stating exactly where Henderson's enslaved people lived and labored. They may have been on the same property as the couple, or on one of Henderson's other tracts. More research into Henderson's landholdings during this period of his life might prove helpful.

The testimony given in 1800 relates to a freedom petition involving Easter, Cate, and their descendants, apparently based on white parentage. Although the historical record doesn't mention who filed the freedom suit, Benjamin "Marsh" Duvall stated: "That the said negro [sic] woman Cate had two children (Molatto's) [sic] one of which was born about twelve months before the deponents going to live with said Henderson [circa 1734] and the other born the second year afterwards [circa 1737] – that he never heard of negro [sic] Cates being free but had always understood that Easter the mother of Cate, as well Cate and her children Rachel and Barbary were Slaves – The deponent further saith that he had likewise understood that the father of the said Rachel and Barbary was a certain Patrick Doyle living and being a servant in the family of said Henderson. He further saith in the year 1735 he engaged to live in the family of said Henderson and that during the term aforesaid he had never heard that any of said Hendersons negroes [sic] were free or intitled to there freedom nor did he ever know or hear that ever there was a white or Molatto [sic] child left by any person at said place during his residence of eighteen years at said Jacob Hendersons." Further research might shed light on this intriguing story, including the names of the individuals suing for their freedom. Duvall genealogist Harry W. Newman states "it was proved . . . That they had been sired by a white Irishman of a negro [sic] slave, so consequently all issue by law were declared to have been non-free born." This indicates Rachel and Barbary were the petitioners, but Newman doesn't list his source for the settlement of the case, if it was indeed formally settled.

There is another outstanding question which begs an answer. Benjamin "Marsh" testified, "Rachel and Barbary the grandchildren of Easter continued with their mother, Cate during the time the deponent remained in the family of Henderson." If, as he states, he lived with the Hendersons for 18 years beginning in 1735, he would have been there until 1753. However, Rachel and Barbary don't appear on Henderson's 1752 inventory. Perhaps Benjamin "Marsh" actually left after Henderson died on October 26, 1751. Between Henderson's death and the 1752 estate inventory, Rachel and Barbary could have been sold away or self-emancipated.

Jack [Unknown], ca.before 1752 to ? (JaUnk)	Possible	Grandparent	When Easter's enslaver Ridgely died in 1710, the name Easter doesn't appear on the estate inventory, but there is an Ester heading the list of enslaved women. Easter could be Ester. Additionally, in the same inventory, is a man named Jack heading the list of enslaved men. This may indicate that the two were a couple, particularly when added to Benjamin Duvall's testimony that "he knew many of the slaves of the said Henderson, particularly two called Jack and Easter." It is possible that Jack was the father of Cate, thus Barbary's grandparent.

Description:	Per Benjamin "Marsh" Duvall's testimony, "Cate had two children (Molatto's) [sic] one of which was born about twelve months before the deponents going to live with said Henderson [circa 1734] and the other born the second year afterwards [circa 1737]." Barbary would likely have been born at Catton Plantation, while enslaved by Mary Duvall Ridgely and Rev. Jacob Henderson.
Documented	Unknown	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	1735-53	<input type="checkbox"/>		Prince George's County, MD
Description:	Depositions taken in the year 1800 relate to a claim for freedom based on white parentage and were given by Susanna Grey, a neighbor of Rev. Jacob Henderson's; Benjamin Duvall "Marsh," son of Mareen the Younger and grandson of Mareen the Emigrant; and Benjamin Duvall, son of Benjamin Duvall, Sr., grandson of Mareen the Emigrant, and father of Gabriel Duvall. The three deponents state they never heard any of Henderson's enslaved individuals were entitled to or claimed freedom, and they never heard of a white or mixed-race child in the family of Henderson or left at Henderson's residence. Although the historical record doesn't mention who filed the freedom suit, the case relates to Easter, her daughter Cate, and Cate's children Rachel and Barbary. Rachel and Barbary were fathered by a white Irish servant in Henderson's household. Further research might shed light on this intriguing story, including the names of the individuals suing for their freedom. Newman states "it was proved . . . that they had been sired by a white Irishman of a negro [sic] slave, so consequently all issue by law were declared to have been non-free born." This indicates Rachel and Barbary were the petitioners, but Newman doesn't list his source for the settlement of the case, if it was indeed formally settled.

Biographical Narrative: Basil was born around 1760-74 (sources vary regarding his age), perhaps at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove), or he may have been purchased by Gabriel Duvall later. Per Marietta director Julie Rose, Basil performed some manservant duties for Gabriel. In particular, when Gabriel was serving in the U.S. Army in Philadelphia in 1794, Basil appears to have accompanied him. A letter from that time indicates Gabriel sent Basil back to the Old Mansion/Wigwam prior to coming home himself. After Gabriel's death in 1844, Basil was bequeathed to Edmund B. Duval, Jr., who also inherited Marietta where Basil appeared to have continued to labor and reside. Although his name is not listed in the 1850 and 1860 Slave Schedules, he was likely the 87-year-old man listed in 1850, and the 100-year-old man listed in 1860 in Edmund's enslaved holdings. In 1942, Edmund's daughter Kate wrote about an enslaved man who died at age 101, likely Basil.

Benjamin Duckett (GD1157)

Marietta Associated: ☒ Checking the "Marietta Associated" box means this individual was enslaved at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) OR at Marietta.

Name: Benjamin Duckett (GD1157)

Gender: Male

Religion:

Date of Birth: ☒ ca? 1831

Place of Birth: Marietta, Prince George's County, MD

Date of Death: ☐

Place of Death:

Race: Black

Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics: Height: 5' 10" - 5' 11"

Biographical Narrative: Benjamin (Ben) Duckett was the child of Amelia and Jacob Duckett, and all three individuals (and other family members) were enslaved by Gabriel Duvall. He was first recorded as enslaved by Gabriel in 1833 and assigned a monetary "value" of $30, meaning he was a young child. He was born around 1831 at Marietta and was later recorded among those believed to be the other children of Amelia and Jacob: Elizabeth, Martha, Isaiah, Elias, Jane, Hezekiah, Eley, Margaret Ann. In his 1840 will, Gabriel bequeathed Ben to his grandson Edmund B. Duval, Jr., who became Ben's new enslaver after Gabriel's death in 1844. Edmund reached his majority in 1847 and took over Marietta, and Ben most likely lived and labored there. At some point between 1847 and 1855, Edmund sold Ben to a nearby enslaver named Zachariah Berry. On September 16, 1856, Benjamin self-emancipated from Berry and headed to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Upon reaching Philadelphia, he met Underground Railroad conductor William Still, who recorded their meeting. There are no known, available records pertaining to Ben Duckett after the year 1856.

Description:	Ben Duckett was recorded as arriving in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania about three weeks after his self-emancipation. He was directed to William Still of the Underground Railroad in that city. According to sources, Ben "was supplied with a small sum of money for continued passage northward. It was also standard practice of the Northern Underground Railroad to provide a list of contacts and letters of introduction to runaways. The late date during which he fled suggests that he headed for Canada, perhaps to St. Catherine's where hundreds of Maryland fugitives had gone before him." No further information regarding his whereabouts has been located, although Berry continued to advertise for his return, suggesting Ben was successful in his bid for freedom.

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Brown (born August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912) come through the ca. 1908 marriage of Calphus and Margaret's son William A. Brown to a woman named Louise

(Lizie).

Biographical Narrative: Betty was enslaved by Mareen Duvall at Middle Plantation in Anne Arundel County, MD, and appears in the 1694 appraisal of Mareen's estate after his death, where she was given a monetary "value" of £26. Mareen did not bequeath any of his enslaved individuals to his son Benjamin Duvall, Sr., so Betty and her potential descendants likely had no ties to the Old Mansion/Wigwam or Marietta. Rather, some of Mareen's enslaved people were inherited by his widow Mary Duvall, who then married Colonel Henry Ridgely in 1695. The couple lived at Middle Plantation for a few years before moving to Catton Plantation in Prince George's County around 1700, and Betty likely moved with them. In 1710, Ridgely died, and the inventory of his estate included a woman named Betty assigned a monetary "value" of £20. The inventory also lists a young enslaved girl named Betty, who may have been Betty's daughter. There is no further record of Betty after this date.

Biographical Narrative: Harry Wallace's brother (name unknown) was enslaved by the family of the late Richard B. Lloyd, Esq. [possibly Richard Bennett Lloyd] in Queen Anne's County. Harry was born into enslavement by the Lloyds (circa 1778) and it's possible that his brother was as well. If Harry's brother's enslaver was Richard Bennett Lloyd, Lloyd died in 1787. It's unclear who in the Lloyd family was the legal enslaver of Harry's brother. Harry Wallace self-emancipated from Gabriel Duvall on April 4, 1801, and the information on Harry's brother is found in a newspaper notice in Easton, Maryland's "Herald and Eastern Shore Intelligencer." The notice states Harry's wife stole money from her enslaver's wife [Mrs. Baldwin], some of which was found in Harry's possession, and this is what prompted him to leave. There is no further information related to either Harry or his brother at this time.

Description: "Thirty Dollars Reward. Ran away from the subscriber's plantation near Mr. Baldwin's tavern, in Prince-George's county, on Saturday last, a likely young negro [sic] fellow named HARRY: he sometimes calls himself Henry Wallace. He is a likely black smooth faced young man, about 23 years of age, about 5 feet 2 inches high, straight and well made, He speaks in a slow and careless manner, sometimes hesitates, and when alarmed, stammers, and when made angry, his eyes have a redish cast. He had on and took with him a coarse felt hat, half worn, & rather high crowned, a dy'd cotton great coat almost new, with metal buttons a coarse dark colored jacket with full cape, and large metal buttons, three oznabrig shirts, a white gingham coat, green kersey overalls, having a small patch on the left knee; several waistcoats, one of which is a swandown, and a pair of short stockings. He is smart and active, can wrestle, box, beat a drum, sing and dance very well. His wife, the property of Mr. Baldwin, has been lately detected in stealing 15 or 20 dollars from her mistress, a part of which was found on Harry, and he fearing the consequences, made his escape. As it is probable he is not without cash, he may change his cloths; and it is likely he will change his name. He was born in Queen Ann's county, in the family of the late Richard B. Lloyd, Esq. and has a brother and other relations there. Whoever will apprehend Harry and secure him in gaol or otherwise, so that I may get him again, shall receive a reward of Thirty Dollars. All matters of vessels are cautioned against carrying him away. Gabriel Duvall. April 9, 1801."
Notes: Although Harry left on April 4, 1801, the notice first appeared in the May 12, 1801 (and subsequent) editions of this newspaper until September 8, 1801.

Marietta Associated: ☒ Checking the "Marietta Associated" box means this individual was enslaved at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) OR at Marietta.

Name: Calphus Brown (GD222) Gender: Male Religion:

Date of Birth: ☒ ca? 1843-44 Place of Birth: Marietta, Prince George's County, MD

Date of Death: ☒ 1870-80 Place of Death: Washington, D.C.

Race: Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Calphus Brown was the child of Everlina, both of whom were enslaved by Gabriel Duvall and Edmund B. Duval, Jr. Calphus doesn't appear in Gabriel's 1838 or 1840 wills, but he does appear in the 1844 estate inventory after Gabriel's death. He is assessed together with his mother, so he was likely born in 1843-44. Everlina likely had two other children named Walter Brown (born ca. 1850-56) and Maria (born ca. 1840), who would have been Calphus's siblings. There is no specific bequest relating to Calphus by name since he doesn't appear in either of Gabriel's wills; however, the 1840 will states that any future children of Everlina were also to be enslaved by Edmund B. Duval, Jr. Therefore, Edmund became Calphus's new enslaver after Gabriel's 1844 death. An individual matching Calphus's age, gender, and monetary "value" lived and labored at Marietta from 1844-60. When the Civil War occurred, Calphus Brown (named in a newspaper article as enslaved by Edmund B. Duval, Jr.) was drafted into the United States Colored Troops, 2nd U.S. Colored Infantry, Company E, on August 20, 1863 for a term of three years. Calphus saw action in Florida in 1864 and 1865. After emancipation, Calphus married Margaret Ann Duckett (formerly enslaved by Gabriel Duvall and Marcus Duval) in Washington, D.C. on September 23, 1867. The couple had two children: William Brown (born ca. 1868) and Elias Brown (born circa 1870). Calphus died between 1870-80, and in 1882 Margaret applied for the widow's pension resulting from Calphus's service with the United States Colored Infantry during the Civil War.

Description:	Margaret Brown and her family were enumerated in the 1880 U.S. Federal Census at 428 Ridge Street NW in Washington, D.C. She was recorded as 30 years old, widowed, and employed as a servant. Margaret lived in the home with her two sons, 12-year-old William and 10-year-old Elias, and her parents, Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165). As Margaret was identified as a widow in 1880, we must surmise that Calphus Brown died prior to the taking of said census.
Notes:	NOTE: In the various censuses, Margaret is listed as being born in either 1848 or 1850, but this can't be the case if she was assessed in the 1844 estate inventory for Gabriel Duvall.

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Brown (born August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912) come through the ca. 1908 marriage of Calphus and Margaret's son William A. Brown to a woman named Louise (Lizie).

Biographical Narrative: Little is currently known about Caroline other than that she was enslaved by Gabriel Duvall at Marietta. Caroline was first mentioned by name in the inventory taken in 1844 after Gabriel's death, where she was assigned a monetary "value" of $250, but her age was not given. Although Gabriel specifically mentioned several enslaved individuals in his will and to whom they should be bequeathed, Caroline was not one of those individuals. For those not specifically mentioned, the will indicated his grandsons should divide between themselves "equally all the remainder of my slaves with their future increase [sic] ...". Because Caroline was not identified by name, she could have been bequeathed to either Marcus Duval or Edmund B. Duval, Jr. Due to the lack of specificity in the will, and her unknown age, we are hesitant to predict Caroline's path after the death of Gabriel.

Biographical Narrative: Cary was born to Serena in September 1830. Both Cary and her mother were enslaved by Edmund B. Duval, Sr., although the date of their enslavement is unknown. As Cary's birth occurred five months prior to Edmund's death, it's quite possible that she was born at the Old Mansion. Other family members enslaved by the Duvalls include Cary's siblings (Serena's other children): Rachel, Seneca, Edward, Amelia, and Randolph. Although Cary was never referred to as Cary Jackson, we believe she potentially shared the same last name as those believed to have been her siblings. Cary also had a niece named Emily, who was Rachel's daughter. The first documentation of Cary is in an April 16, 1831 estate inventory of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. taken after his death, where Cary is listed as an enslaved 7-month-old child. After Edmund's death, his wife Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval selected Cary's mother Serena (and two other individuals) as part of her dower's thirds, becoming Serena's new enslaver. Cary and the remaining enslaved individuals not selected by Augusta were inherited by Edmund and Augusta's four children equally. Therefore, Marcus Duval, Edmund B. Duval, Jr., Mary Frances Duval, and Gabriella Augusta Duval became Cary's new enslavers in 1831. After the death of their mother Augusta in 1832, their grandfather Gabriel Duval acted as the orphaned children's guardian and managed the financial affairs of their estate, and the lives of those they enslaved, until his grandchildren reached their majority. Gabriel hired out his grandchildren's enslaved individuals, including Cary's mother Serena, and used their labor at Marietta. He compensated the heirs' estate for their use. Gabriel Duval's account book for the guardianship of the heirs of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. showed that in the year 1832 while other enslaved people "worked in the crops, as usual, to support the family of the deceased," Serena stayed in the kitchen, caring for her young children. It is most likely that the very young Cary remained with her mother, Serena, during this period and continued to do so for several years afterwards, being too young to perform hireable labor for Gabriel Duval. She may have been forced to perform some of the lighter tasks around Marietta. In 1846, a child named Harriet was enslaved by Gabriella Augusta Duval. Harriet would have been the daughter of one of Gabriella Augusta Duval's female enslaved individuals, likely either Martha Duckett or Cary Jackson. From 1846-48, Cary was hired out from Gabriella Augusta Duval's estate. Gabriella may have become her primary enslaver by this time. It's likely that Cary attempted to self-emancipate in 1850 as a woman named Cary Ann was imprisoned as a "runaway" in the District of Columbia on April 3, 1850. She was released to "G.A. Duval" on April 11, 1850. Gabriella was still residing at Marietta during 1850. There are no known, available records pertaining to Cary after the year 1850.

Description:	It's unknown whether Cary was born enslaved as there are no extant records indicating the date of her mother Serena's enslavement by Edmund B. Description:	Cary, a female child aged about 7 months and assigned a monetary "value" of $20.00, was listed on the estate inventory of the deceased Edmund Bryce Duval, Sr. Cary was listed under Serena in what is believed to have been a family grouping. This conclusion was supported by the family groupings listed in an extant, unrecorded inventory of Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s estate.

Description:	Gabriel Duvall's account book for the guardianship of the heirs of Edmund B. Description:	Gabriel Duvall's hiring record accounted for Serena and the "maintenance of her 3 children and $12.00." A crossed-out entry for 1840 records the ages of Serena's children as ranging from 3 to 9. Cary, born in 1830, would have been 9 in 1839. Additional Information

Edmund B. Duval, Sr. died intestate in 1831. The administration of Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s estate fell to his father, Gabriel Duvall. By law, Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s widow, Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, inherited her chosen one-third (her dower) of his enslaved persons. Augusta C. McCausland Duval died in October of 1832. At that time, the enslaved of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. and Augusta C. McCausland Duval were bequeathed to their four living children: Marcus Du Val, Edmund B. Duval, Jr., Mary Frances Duval, Gabriella Augusta Duval. Gabriel Duvall, grandfather of the said four heirs, was the manager and guardian of all their inherited enslaved persons until the four heirs reached their majorities. Documentation of Gabriel Duvall's personal accounts for the grandchildren survived and provided a fuller account of this group of enslaved individuals. Although there is evidence of enslaved ownership by Edmund B. Duval, Sr. that dated back to 1818, our only current understanding of the specifically named enslaved individuals of his estate is from 1831. We have no information at this time of their origins prior to their enslavement by Edmund B. Duval, Sr.

Currently, we have found no record of the enslaved of Marietta having come from the family of Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval. Augusta's father, Marcus McCausland, was recorded on the 1820 U.S. Federal Census as having five enslaved individuals in Baltimore County, Maryland. Marcus McCausland died in 1828 leaving everything to his wife and executrix, Mary Ann McCausland. The inventory of Marcus McCausland's estate recorded no enslaved. Mary Ann McCausland was recorded with no enslaved on the 1830 U.S. Federal Census. We have currently found no record of the whereabouts of those five enslaved individuals that were enumerated in 1820. No deed of purchase or deed of gift transferring ownership of an enslaved individual from the McCauslands to the Duvals was located.

Place of Birth: likely Catton Plantation [renamed Belair], Prince George's County, MD

Date of Death: ☐

Place of Death:

Race: Black

Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Cate was born circa 1710-11 into enslavement. Per testimony given in 1800 by Mareen Duvall's two grandsons, Benjamin Duvall and Benjamin "Marsh" Duvall, we know that Cate's mother Easter was enslaved by Mareen Duvall at Middle Plantation in Anne Arundel County. After his 1694 death, an estate inventory was conducted, and although there is no woman named Easter on that inventory, there is a Hester. It's possible that the clerk wrote the name Hester instead of Easter or that the Benjamin Duvalls misremembered her name in their depositions. Easter would have moved to Catton Plantation in Prince George's County, MD upon Mary Duvall Ridgely Henderson's (Mareen's widow) marriage to Col. Henry Ridgely, and her daughter Cate was likely born on Catton Plantation. Ridgely died in 1710, and the name Easter doesn't appear on the estate inventory, but there is an Ester heading the list of enslaved women. Easter could be Hester / Ester. Additionally, in the same inventory, is a man named Jack heading the list of enslaved men. This may indicate that the two were a couple, particularly when added to Benjamin Duvall's testimony that "he knew many of the slaves of the said Henderson, particularly two called Jack and Easter." A one-year-old girl child (name not listed) is also in the inventory. Since Easter's daughter Cate was born circa 1711, it's possible this girl child is Cate and that Jack was her father, but this is merely a hypothesis with no other documentation to confirm the theory.

After Henry Ridgely died, Mary Duvall Ridgely married Reverend Jacob Henderson, circa 1712. If Cate was not the one-year-old girl in Ridgely's inventory, she would have been born while enslaved by Rev. Henderson and lived with her mother and the Hendersons at Catton Plantation, which Henderson renamed "Belair" in 1721. In 1721 Henderson leased Belair and the Hendersons moved away, but sources do not indicate where they lived between 1721-34. By 1735 they lived in Prince George's County near the site of the present-day Holy Trinity Episcopal Church in Bowie, Maryland. There are no extant sources stating exactly where Henderson's enslaved people lived and labored. They may have been on the same property as the couple, or on one of Henderson's other tracts. More research into Henderson's landholdings during this period of his life might prove helpful.

The testimony given in 1800 relates to a freedom petition involving Easter, Cate, and their descendants, apparently based on white parentage. Although the historical record doesn't mention who filed the freedom suit, Benjamin "Marsh" Duvall stated: "That the said negro [sic] woman Cate had two children (Molatto's) [sic] one of which was born about twelve months before the deponents going to live with said Henderson [circa 1734] and the other born the second year afterwards [circa 1737] – that he never heard of negro [sic] Cates being free but had always understood that Easter the mother of Cate, as well Cate and her children Rachel and Barbary were Slaves – The deponent further saith that he had likewise understood that the father of the said Rachel and Barbary was a certain Patrick Doyle living and being a servant in the family of said Henderson. He further saith in the year 1735 he engaged to live in the family of said Henderson and that during the term afores.d he had never heard that any of said Hendersons negroes [sic] were free or intitled to there freedom nor did he ever know or hear that ever there was a white or Molatto [sic] child left by any person at said place during his residence of eighteen years at said Jacob Hendersons." Further research might shed light on this intriguing story, including the names of the individuals suing for their freedom. Duvall genealogist Harry W. Newman states "it was proved . . . That they had been sired by a white Irishman of a negro [sic] slave, so consequently all issue by law were declared to have been non-free born." This indicates Rachel and Barbary were the petitioners, but Newman doesn't list his source for the settlement of the case, if it was indeed formally settled.

Mary Duvall Ridgely Henderson died on January 19, 1735, and Henderson died in 1751. Upon his death, he left his enslaved individuals to his second wife Mary Stanton Tyler Henderson [note: Mary Duvall Ridgely Henderson is often confused with Mary Stanton, but they are not the same individual. We do not know Mary Duvall's maiden name]. There is no Easter, Hester, or Ester on Henderson's 1752 estate inventory, and Easter may have died prior to Henderson's death. There is a Kate, listed as 47 years old, which means she was born circa 1705. This birth date is six years earlier than Easter's daughter Cate's circa 1711 birth date, but the 1711 date is an estimate based upon Benjamin "Marsh" Duvall's testimony. He stated that he and Cate were of a similar age in 1735 (24 years old). It's possible that Benjamin "Marsh" was off by six years when estimating her age, or that the Henderson inventory listed her as six years older than her true age. For some reason, Cate's children Rachel and Barbary do not appear on the 1752 inventory, which is odd given that Benjamin "Marsh" claimed Rachel and Barbary "continued with their mother, Cate during the time the deponent remained in the family of Henderson." If Benjamin "Marsh" lived there for 18 years as stated, he would have been there until 1753. However, he could have left after Henderson died on October 26, 1751. Perhaps between Henderson's death and the estate inventory, Rachel and Barbary were sold away or self-emancipated.

After Mareen Duvall died in 1694, his widow Mary Duvall married Col. Henry Ridgely in 1695. She brought some enslaved individuals into the marriage with Ridgely, including Cate's mother Easter. It's unclear whether legal ownership of the enslaved transferred to Ridgely upon their marriage. However, since enslaved individuals that were once at Middle Plantation appear in Ridgely's 1710 estate inventory after his death, we are naming him as the primary enslaver unless other records come to light showing Mary Duvall Ridgely [later Henderson] as the primary enslaver. We don't know if Cate was born, and thus enslaved, prior to Ridgely's death in 1710, but it's possible she is the one-year-old girl child (no name listed) appearing on Ridgely's estate inventory.

Duvall Ridgely Henderson, Mary, 1675 to 1/19/1735 (MDRH)

☐ 1710

Per the 1800 testimony of Benjamin Duvall and Benjamin "Marsh" Duvall, Cate was enslaved by Rev. Jacob Henderson. If Cate was born prior Mary Duvall Ridgely's marriage to Henderson circa 1712, Mary Duvall Ridgely would have been Cate's primary enslaver in the years between the death of Henry Ridgely and her marriage to Rev. Jacob Henderson.

Henderson, Rev. Jacob, ca. 1681 to 8/26/1751 (JH)

☒ 1712

After Henry Ridgely died in 1710, Mary Duvall Ridgely married Reverend Jacob Henderson, circa 1712. Testimony given by the Benjamin Duvalls states that Easter and Cate (and Cate's children Rachel and Barbary) were enslaved by Reverend Henderson after his marriage to Mary Duvall Ridgely Henderson. Legal ownership of the family may have transferred from Mary to Henderson after this marriage.

Biographical Narrative: Charity was enslaved by Gabriel Duvall at Marietta and was likely born into slavery around 1825-33. She was first identified by name in Gabriel's 1833 tax records. She next appeared in Gabriel's 1838 will, where he stated she should be inherited by his grandson Marcus Duval. In 1840, Gabriel wrote a new will, bequeathing her instead to his other grandson Edmund B. Duval, Jr. (who also inherited Marietta). Edmund became Charity's new enslaver after Gabriel's death in 1844. Although no records after the year 1844 mention Charity by name, an individual matching her age, gender, and monetary "value" appears in Edmund's enslaved holdings in 1850 and 1860, so she may have continued to labor and reside at Marietta during that time.

Biographical Narrative: Charles was sold by Thomas Beard to Gabriel Duvall in 1800. The sale took place in Anne Arundel County, likely Annapolis, as Gabriel was living there. The deed of sale described Charles as a man, so he likely would have been born prior to 1780. It's unknown how long Thomas Beard held Charles in slavery prior to the sale to Gabriel, and whether Gabriel kept Charles in Annapolis, D.C., Marietta, or the Old Mansion/Wigwam afterwards. Charles did not appear in Gabriel's 1833 Personal Property Tax list which identified all enslaved people by first name. It is likely that Charles was either sold, dead, or had self-emancipated prior to 1833.

Biographical Narrative: Charles Buckanan was the husband of Fanny Buckanan and believed to be a free person of color by 1827. He may or may not have been enslaved at some point prior to that date. Much of what we know about Charles and his family comes from information related to his wife Fanny, who was enslaved originally by Benjamin Duvall, Jr., and later by Sarah Duvall beginning in 1801. At some point before 1827, Fanny married Charles Buckanan and the couple had four children: John, Elizabeth, Charles, Nicholas. As Fanny was enslaved, the four children of the couple were born into slavery with Sarah Duvall as their enslaver. It is possible that Fanny and her children may have resided with Charles during the period from 1813-26. On October 5, 1827, Sarah Duvall manumitted Fanny and her children for one dollar. The next record of the family is in the 1830 census in which Charles Buckanan appears as the head of a family residing in the District of Columbia. Only Charles is mentioned by name, but the other individuals match the gender and ages of Fanny, John, Elizabeth, and Charles. It's unclear what happened to Nicholas. On September 10, 1830, Charles Buckanan wrote a will naming Frances [Fanny], John, Elizabeth, and Charles as his heirs. Charles died very shortly after around September 18, 1830.

Date of Death: ☐ ? Place of Death:

Race: Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Charles Burgess was likely born into enslavement at Marietta between 1825 and 1833. If he is the same 35-year-old Charles Burgess that enlisted in the United States Colored Troops (USCT) in 1864, his birth year would be circa 1829. Charles was first enslaved by Gabriel Duvall before being bequeathed to Gabriel's granddaughter, Mary Frances Duval, in 1844. Mary Frances may have transferred Charles's ownership to her brother, Marcus Duval. In 1852, Charles attempted to self-emancipate, leaving Marietta before being apprehended and put in the Baltimore City jail on June 14, 1852. He was released to Marcus Duval, who was by then identified as Charles's enslaver, and was likely returned to either Marietta or the Wigwam, Marcus's plantation. In 1864, a Charles Burgess from Prince George's County was recorded as enlisting with the U. S. Colored Troops (USCT). More research is needed to follow the trajectory of this Charles Burgess.

In 1852, a Charles Burgess believed to be the same one bequeathed to Mary Frances was released from a jail in Baltimore to Marcus Duval after attempting to self-emancipate. It is unknown why Marcus was listed as Charles's enslaver, but it could be because Charles's ownership was transferred to him at some point.

Marietta Associated: ☒ Checking the "Marietta Associated" box means this individual was enslaved at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) OR at Marietta.

Name: Charles Black (DD9) Gender: Male Religion:

Date of Birth: ☒ ca? 1830 Place of Birth: Likely at the Old Mansion / Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove), Prince George's County, MD

Date of Death: ☐ Place of Death:

Race: Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: As his mother Henny Black was enslaved by Delilah Duvall, Charles Black was born into enslavement circa 1830, likely at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove). Charles's siblings Joseph Black (born ca. 1833) and Lucy Black (born ca. 1835) were also born enslaved by Delilah. On May 13, 1836, Delilah Duvall wrote a deed of manumission, which would free Henny, Henny's mother Jane Black, and Henny's three children upon the death of Delilah. The deed also included freedom for any future children of Henny. However, after Delilah's death in 1839, tax records indicate an enslaved person thought to be Charles Black still at the Old Mansion through 1841, along with other family members. His mother Henny was likely manumitted circa 1842-43, as a sworn statement was given by a Richard Smith to the Prince George's County Court on September 17, 1843, attesting that Jane and Henny Black were manumitted by Delilah Duvall's death. No mention of Henny's children, including Charles, was made in the sworn statement. It's likely that Henny and her mother Jane moved to Washington, D.C. as census records from 1850 show a "Hannah" Black living with a woman named "J. Black" and a child named Joseph Black (likely Charles's brother). However, Charles does not appear in the census record. There are no known, available records pertaining to Charles Black after the year 1841. It is unclear what happened to him.

Biographical Narrative: 1807, likely at the Old Mansion / Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove). Since her mother Kate was enslaved by Sarah Duvall, this child would have been born enslaved. We know Kate had at least three children by 1794, and she is first mentioned by name in Benjamin Duvall's will of that year, which states "Kate and her three children" (BDjr27, BDjr28, BDjr29, names all unknown) and any future children (SD23, name unknown; likely SD7, Fanny Buchanan) were bequeathed to his daughter Sarah Duvall. This child of Kate matches the description of an individual (name unknown) that was enslaved by Sarah Duvall in 1807 and 1808 at the Old Mansion. There are no known, available records pertaining to this child of Kate after the year 1808.

Biographical Narrative: Very little is known about this child (name and gender unknown) that was born between 1794-1802. Based on the location given in the 1802 tax record for this child, we believe this individual was a child of Ruth and was likely born at the Old Mansion / Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove). We know Ruth had at least three children by 1794, and she is first mentioned in Benjamin Duvall's will of that year, which states "Ruth and her three children" [BDjr21 - name unknown, BDjr22 - name unknown, BDjr23 - Jane Black] and future children [DD12 - name unknown, DD6 - Moses Black, DD13 - name unknown; DD18 - name unknown] would pass to his daughter, Delilah Duvall. Depending upon when this child was born, it's possible the child was enslaved by both Benjamin Duvall, Jr. and Delilah Duvall. Unfortunately, there are no further records for this child of Ruth after 1802, and it's likely this child either died or was sold by Delilah.

Duvall, Jr., Benjamin, 5/29/1719 to 1801 (BDjr)	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	1802 (possibly 1794)	This child appears as "8 years old or under" in Delilah Duvall's 1802 tax records. The child was not listed on Benjamin Duvall's 5/17/1794 will, but could have been enslaved by Benjamin between 5/18/1794 until Benjamin's death in 1801. Ruth and all her children were then bequeathed to Delilah Duvall.

Biographical Narrative: Very little is known about this child (name and gender unknown) that was born into enslavement circa 1805, likely at the Old Mansion / Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove). Its mother Ruth was enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr. by 1794 (possibly 1783). We know Ruth had at least three children by 1794, and she is first mentioned by name in Benjamin Duvall's will of that year, which states "Ruth and her three children" [BDjr21 - name unknown, BDjr22 - name unknown, BDjr23 - Jane Black] and future children [DD12 - name unknown, DD6 - Moses Black, DD13 - name unknown; DD18 - name unknown] would pass to his daughter, Delilah Duvall. Thus, after Benjamin's death circa January 1801, Ruth and all of her children (and future children) became enslaved by Delilah. The child appears in Delilah's tax records from 1806-17. Unfortunately, there are no further records for this child after 1817. It's unknown at this time if the child died, self-emancipated, or was sold by Delilah.

Date of Birth: ☒ 1774

Place of Birth:

Date of Death: ☒ 1844-50?

Place of Death:

Race:

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: David was born around 1774, although there is no evidence of whether he was born at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) or was purchased later by Gabriel Duvall. David was first identified by name as an adult male over the age of 45 in the 1833 Personal Property Tax record of Gabriel Duvall. In his 1838 and 1840 wills, Gabriel bequeathed Arthur to his grandson Marcus Duval, and Marcus likely became David's enslaver in 1844 after Gabriel's death. David is listed as a 70-year-old man in the 1844 inventory. David may have lived and worked at the Old Mansion/Wigwam property after 1844, but he doesn't appear in Marcus's 1850 enslavement records. This could be due to a variety of factors, but given David's advanced age, it is most likely that he had died between 1844 and 1850.

Biographical Narrative: Easter's birth date and birth location are unknown, but as she was enslaved by Mareen Duvall prior to his 1694 death, she was born prior to 1694. In an 1800 freedom petition involving Jacob Henderson and descendants of Easter, Mareen's two grandsons Benjamin Duvall and Benjamin "Marsh" Duvall gave testimony that their grandfather had enslaved Easter. They also provide information on Easter's daughter and grandchildren, with Benjamin "Marsh" stating "that he never heard of negro [sic] Cates being free but had always understood that Easter the mother of Cate [born ca. 1710-11?], as well Cate and her children Rachel [born ca. 1735] and Barbary [born ca. 1737] were Slaves." There is a possibility that Easter's spouse / partner (Cate's father?) was a man named Jack, as Benjamin Duvall states "he knew many of the slaves of the said Henderson, particularly two called Jack and Easter." While Mareen Duvall was alive, and for a few years after his death, Easter lived on Mareen's tobacco plantation named Middle Plantation in Anne Arundel County, Maryland. After his 1694 death, an estate inventory was conducted, but there is no woman named Easter on that inventory. However, there is a Hester. It's possible that the clerk wrote the name Hester instead of Easter or that the Benjamin Duvalls misremembered her name in their depositions. As of now, we are concluding that Hester and Easter are the same person.

After Mareen Duvall died, his widow Mary Duvall married her second husband, Col. Henry Ridgely, in 1695. Around 1700, the couple moved to Catton Plantation in Prince George's County, Maryland. Mary brought some enslaved individuals into the marriage with Ridgely, although it's unclear whether their legal ownership transferred to Ridgely upon their marriage. Since enslaved individuals that were once at Middle Plantation appear in Ridgely's estate inventory after his death in 1710, we are considering him as the primary enslaver. We know per the Benjamin Duvalls' testimony that Easter was enslaved by Mary Duvall Ridgely's third husband Reverend Jacob Henderson, so we conclude that Easter was also enslaved by Ridgely. As with Mareen's inventory, the name Easter doesn't appear on Ridgely's 1710 estate inventory, but there is an Ester heading the list of enslaved women. Easter could be Hester / Ester and we are concluding that they are at this point. Additionally, in the same inventory, is a man named Jack heading the list of enslaved men. This may indicate that the two were a couple. A one-year-old girl child (name not listed) is also in the inventory. Since Easter's daughter Cate was born circa 1711, it's possible this girl child is Cate, but this is merely a hypothesis with no other documentation to confirm the theory.

After Henry Ridgely died, Mary Duvall Ridgely married Reverend Jacob Henderson, circa 1712. Easter likely lived with the couple at Catton Plantation, which Henderson renamed "Belair" in 1721. In 1721 Henderson leased Belair and the couple moved away, but sources do not indicate where they lived between 1721-34. By 1735 they lived in Prince George's County near the site of the present-day Holy Trinity Episcopal Church in Bowie, Maryland. There are no extant sources stating exactly where Henderson's enslaved lived and labored. They may have been on the same property as the couple, or on one of Henderson's other tracts. More research into Henderson's landholdings during this period of his life might prove helpful. Mary Duvall Ridgely Henderson died on January 19, 1736, and Henderson died in 1751. Upon his death, he left his enslaved individuals to his second wife Mary Stanton Tyler Henderson [note: Mary Duvall Ridgely Henderson is often confused with Mary Stanton, but they are not the same individual. We do not know Mary Duvall's maiden name]. There is no Easter, Hester, or Ester on Henderson's 1752 estate inventory, and Easter may have died prior to Henderson's death.

Notes

Easter was enslaved by Mareen Duvall at Middle Plantation. Although the name Easter doesn't appear on the 1694 inventory taken after Mareen Duvall's death, it's possible that she was the "Hester" that appears in the inventory. This is based on testimony taken in 1800 from Mareen's grandson Benjamin "Marsh" Duvall that he "was well acquainted with all the old negroes [sic] before they came into possession of said Henderson and that Easter the mother of Cate belonged to his the Deponents grandfather Mareen Duvall."

Report: Enslaved Individual

Easter [Unknown] (MnD19)

Duvall Ridgely Henderson, Mary, 1675 to 1/19/1735 (MDRH) ☐ 1695

After Mareen Duvall died in 1694, his widow Mary Duvall married Col. Henry Ridgely in 1695. She brought some enslaved individuals into the marriage with Ridgely, although it's unclear whether their legal ownership transferred to Ridgely upon their marriage. Since enslaved individuals that were once at Middle Plantation appear in Ridgely's 1710 estate inventory after his death, we are naming him as the primary enslaver unless other records come to light showing Mary Duvall Ridgely [later Henderson] as the primary enslaver.

Ridgely, Henry, ca. 1625-30 to 7/13/1710 (HR) ☒ 1710

Per the 1800 testimony of Benjamin Duvall and Benjamin "Marsh" Duvall, Easter was enslaved by Rev. Jacob Henderson. Therefore, Mary Duvall Ridgely [later Henderson] would have been her enslaver in the years between the death of Henry Ridgely and her marriage to Rev. Jacob Henderson.

Henderson, Rev. Jacob, ca. 1681 to 8/26/1751 (JH) ☒ 1712

After Henry Ridgely died in 1710, Mary Duvall Ridgely married Reverend Jacob Henderson, circa 1712. Testimony given by the Benjamin Duvalls states that Easter was enslaved by Reverend Henderson after his marriage to Mary Duvall Ridgely Henderson. Legal ownership of the family may have transferred from Mary to Henderson after this marriage.

Relation Name	Certainty	Relationship Type

Notes
Easter's enslaver Ridgely died in 1710, and the name Easter doesn't appear on the estate inventory, but there is an Ester heading the list of enslaved women. Easter could be Ester. Additionally, in the same inventory, is a man named Jack heading the list of enslaved men. This may indicate that the two were a couple, particularly when added to Benjamin Duvall's testimony in 1800 that "he knew many of the slaves of the said Henderson, particularly two called Jack and Easter." It's possible that Jack was the father of Cate.

Cate [Unknown], ca.1710-11? to ? (JH1)	Known	Child

Barbary was a child of Cate.

Rachel was a child of Cate.

In testimony given by the Benjamin Duvalls (grandsons of Mareen Duvall), Patrick Doyle is identified as the father of Cate's children Rachel and Barbary. It is unknown whether this relationship with Cate was consensual on her part, thus we are listing the "relationship type" as "unknown" rather than "in-law."

Description: After Mareen Duvall's widow married Henry Ridgely, Easter gave birth to her daughter Cate. It's possible that Cate was the one-year-old girl child (name not listed) appearing on the estate inventory after Henry Ridgely's death in 1710.

Description: Depositions taken in the year 1800 relate to a claim for freedom based on white parentage and were given by Susanna Grey, a neighbor of Rev. Jacob Henderson's; Benjamin Duvall "Marsh," son of Mareen the Younger and grandson of Mareen the Emigrant; and Benjamin Duvall, son of Benjamin Duvall, Sr., grandson of Mareen the Emigrant, and father of Gabriel Duvall. The three deponents state they never heard any of Henderson's enslaved individuals were entitled to or claimed freedom, and they never heard of a white or mixed-race child in the family of Henderson or left at Henderson's residence. Although the historical record doesn't mention who filed the freedom suit, the case relates to Easter, her daughter Cate, and Cate's children Rachel and Barbary. Rachel and Barbary were fathered by a white Irish servant in Henderson's household. Further research might shed light on this intriguing story, including the names of the individuals suing for their freedom. Newman states "it was proved . . . that they had been sired by a white Irishman of a negro [sic] slave, so consequently all issue by law were declared to have been non-free born." This indicates Rachel and Barbary were the petitioners, but Newman doesn't list his source for the settlement of the case, if it was indeed formally settled.

Biographical Narrative: Little is known about Edward Duckett except that his parents were Hezekiah Duckett (formerly enslaved by Gabriel Duval and Marcus Duval) and Rebecca Duckett. His parents had three children: Eliza (born ca. 1867), Edward (born ca. 1873), and Joseph (born ca. 1876). In the 1880 U.S. Federal Census, the family was living at 312 Willow Tree Alley in Washington, D.C. and his parents worked as a laborer and a laundress. It seems that Edward's father died at the approximate age of 45 years old on September 2, 1891.

Notes:	Slight difference in ages -- per the death record Hezekiah would have been born in 1846, but Hezekiah wasn't accounted for in Gabriel's 1844 estate. Per the 1880 census, Hezekiah would have been born in 1840. There is a 6 year gap in the ages given.

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Brown (born August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912) come through the ca. 1908 marriage of Calphus and Margaret's son William A. Brown to a woman named Louise (Lizie).

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Edward "Ned" Jackson was born to Serena in July 1827. Both Edward and his mother were enslaved by Edmund B. Duval, Sr., although the date of their enslavement is unknown. Other family members enslaved by the Duvalls include Edward's siblings (Serena's other children): Rachel, Seneca, Cary, Amelia, and Randolph. Edward also had a niece named Emily, who was Rachel's daughter. The first documentation of Edward is in an April 16, 1831 estate inventory of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. taken after his death, where Edward is listed as an enslaved 3-year-old boy. After Edmund's death, his wife Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval selected Edward's mother Serena (and two other individuals) as part of her dower's thirds, becoming Serena's new enslaver. Edward and the remaining enslaved individuals not selected by Augusta were inherited by Edmund and Augusta's four children equally. Therefore, Marcus Duval, Edmund B. Duval, Jr., Mary Frances Duval, and Gabriella Augusta Duval became Edward's new enslavers in 1831. After the death of their mother Augusta in 1832, their grandfather Gabriel Duvall acted as the orphaned children's guardian and managed the financial affairs of their estate, and the lives of those they enslaved, until his grandchildren reached their majority. Gabriel hired out his grandchildren's enslaved individuals, including Edward, and used their labor at Marietta. He compensated the heirs' estate for their use. From 1832-36, it's believed that Edward remained on site at Marietta with his mother Serena, but was still too young to perform hireable labor for Duvall. Gabriel did "hire out" Edward from the heirs' estate from 1837-42. The next time Edward appears in the historical record is in a May 30, 1864 article in the Baltimore Sun stating that as a "slave of Marcus Duval," Edward was drafted for Civil War service. He would have been part of the U.S. Colored Troops (USCT). There are no known, available records pertaining to Edward after the year 1864, but further research into his military service is warranted.

Military Service

Unknown

5/30/1864

Prince George's County, MD

Description: Edward Jackson was among other draftees named in an article titled "The Draft in Maryland" in the Baltimore Sun on May 30, 1864. Reported as a "slave of Marcus Duval," Edward appeared as part of the First Election District in Prince George's County. This matched Marcus Duval's property location. It is possible that Marcus had become the sole enslaver of Edward at some point.

Notes: More research needs to be conducted to determine whether enslaved individuals were granted freedom upon performing military service, or whether they were still enslaved.

Additional Information

Edmund B. Duval, Sr. died intestate in 1831. The administration of Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s estate fell to his father, Gabriel Duval. By law, Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s widow, Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, inherited her chosen one-third (her dower) of his enslaved persons. Augusta C. McCausland Duval died in October of 1832. At that time, the enslaved of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. and Augusta C. McCausland Duval were bequeathed to their four living children: Marcus Du Val, Edmund B. Duval, Jr., Mary Frances Duval, Gabriella Augusta Duval. Gabriel Duval, grandfather of the said four heirs, was the manager and guardian of all their inherited enslaved persons until the four heirs reached their majorities. Documentation of Gabriel Duval's personal accounts for the grandchildren survived and provided a fuller account of this group of enslaved individuals. Although there is evidence of enslaved ownership by Edmund B. Duval, Sr. that dated back to 1818, our only current understanding of the specifically named enslaved individuals of his estate is from 1831. We have no information at this time of their origins prior to their enslavement by Edmund B. Duval, Sr.

Currently, we have found no record of the enslaved of Marietta having come from the family of Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval. Augusta's father, Marcus McCausland, was recorded on the 1820 U.S. Federal Census as having five enslaved individuals in Baltimore County, Maryland. Marcus McCausland died in 1828 leaving everything to his wife and executrix, Mary Ann McCausland. The inventory of Marcus McCausland's estate recorded no enslaved. Mary Ann McCausland was recorded with no enslaved on the 1830 U.S. Federal Census. We have currently found no record of the whereabouts of those five enslaved individuals that were enumerated in 1820. No deed of purchase or deed of gift transferring ownership of an enslaved individual from the McCauslands to the Duvals was located.

Biographical Narrative: Eley was the child of Amelia and Jacob Duckett, and all three individuals (and other family members) were enslaved by Gabriel Duval. Although Eley was never officially referred to as Eley "Duckett", it's believed Eley potentially shared the same last name as their family. Eley doesn't appear in Gabriel's 1838 or 1840 wills, but Eley does appear in the 1844 estate inventory after his death; therefore, Eley was likely born between 1840-44. There is no specific bequest relating to Eley by name since they don't appear in either will; however, the 1840 will states that any future children of Amelia were to be enslaved by Marcus. On the estate inventory of 1844, Eley is recorded as "infirm" (sick or ill), although it is unknown what type of infirmity Eley had. Eley was recorded among those believed to be the other children of Amelia and Jacob: Elizabeth, Martha, Benjamin, Isaiah, Elias, Jane, Hezekiah, Margaret Ann. After Gabriel's death, Eley's new enslaver was likely Marcus Duval. Marcus reached his majority in December of 1845 and took control of the estate he received from his father Edmund B. Duval, Sr., his mother Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, and his grandfather Gabriel Duval. This included the northern half of the larger Marietta plantation that became known as Wigwam. There are no known, available records pertaining to Eley after 1844, so it's unknown whether Eley moved to Wigwam to live and labor or whether Eley died or was sold by Marcus.

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Elias Brown was born in 1870 to Margaret Ann Duckett and Calphus Brown, who were both previously enslaved by Duvall family members. Elias was likely born in the District of Columbia. As Margaret Ann was listed as a widow by 1880, Elias's father Calphus died prior to that time. Elias is enumerated in the 1880 census as living in Washington, D.C. with his mother, brother William, and grandparents Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165). He was attending school at the time. The 1900 census indicates Margaret had 2 children but only one was still living; however, the 1910 census shows 2 children, 2 living. Elias does not appear with the family after the 1880 census though, so he may have died between 1880 and 1900. Further research might determine what happened to Elias after 1880.

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Brown (born August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912) come through the ca. 1908 marriage of Calphus and Margaret's son William A. Brown to a woman named Louise (Lizie).

Biographical Narrative: Elias was the child of Amelia and Jacob Duckett, and all three individuals (and other family members) were enslaved by Gabriel Duvall. Although Elias was never officially referred to as Elias "Duckett", it's believed he potentially shared the same last name as his family. Elias doesn't appear in Gabriel's 1838 will, but he does appear in the 1840 will; therefore, he was likely born between 1838-40. Per the 1840 will, Gabriel bequeathed Isaiah to his grandson Marcus Duval. After Gabriel's death in 1844, Elias appears on the estate inventory, recorded among those believed to be the other children of Amelia and Jacob: Elizabeth, Martha, Benjamin, Isaiah, Jane, Hezekiah, Eley, Margaret Ann. Marcus Duval reached his majority in December of 1845 and took control of the estate he received from his father Edmund B. Duval, Sr., his mother Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, and his grandfather Gabriel Duvall. This included the northern half of the larger Marietta plantation that became known as Wigwam. Elias most likely resided on Wigwam. An individual matching his life trajectory appears in the enslaved holdings of Marcus in 1850. There are no known, available records pertaining to Elias after 1850.

Biographical Narrative: Thomas Butler, his wife Sarah Butler, and their children Lydia, Jane, and Sally were enslaved by John Dells (or Dales) some time prior to 1799. At various times from 1799-1805, the Butler family lived with Dells in Maryland, Virginia, and the Georgetown neighborhood in Washington, D.C. Dells hired out Thomas and Sarah to Thomas Gossum in Virginia and to Christian Getzendanner in Georgetown. Around 1805 or earlier, Dells sold Thomas and Sarah's children Lydia and Jane away from the family. No record of their sale or their new enslaver has been located. According to witness Matthew Kennedy, in the spring of 1805, Dells and Duvall met in Gabriel's Washington City office and the sale of Thomas, Sarah, and Sally to Duvall was agreed upon. Then Duvall and Dells met at William Duvall's in Georgetown where the sale was finalized, Thomas and Sarah having agreed to the transfer. This would have occurred on May 29 or 30, 1805. Duvall sent Thomas, Sarah, and Sally to Prince George's County to work. This was prior to the building of Marietta, so the Butlers likely lived and labored at the Old Mansion at first. Prior to 1828, Thomas and Sarah had additional children named Matilda, Airy, and Reason. Between 1815-28, they also had two grandchildren named Liddy and Eliza, who were likely born at Marietta. It is not clear which of their children was the parent of Liddy and Eliza.

Fearful that Duvall was planning to sell them, in 1828 all eight members of the Butler family petitioned the D.C. circuit court for their freedom. One of their attorneys was Francis Scott Key. The case centered around whether John Dells had imported the Butlers from Virginia or D.C. in 1805 with the intent to sell them, which would be a violation of the 1796 Maryland Act. Gabriel Duvall stated he did not intend to sell the Butlers and that the case should be tried in a Maryland court, perhaps believing he could obtain a more favorable verdict in his home state. The court declined to change the venue, and decided, in fact, that John Dells did violate the non-importation clause. The Butlers were granted their freedom in 1831.

Description: Testimony given in the Butlers' freedom petition case states that Thomas and Sarah had one child (Sally) when they were purchased by Gabriel Duvall on 5/29/1805. Sally was likely born between 1800-1805. We don't know that Sally was Eliza and Liddy's mother, but if she was, she wouldn't have been of childbearing age until 1815 at the earliest. Therefore, Eliza and Liddy's birth dates are estimated at 1815-28. They would have likely been born enslaved at Marietta, which was completed by 1816.

Biographical Narrative: Elizabeth Buchanan was born enslaved on June 9, 1819 to her enslaved mother Fanny Buchanan and her father Charles Buchanan (a person of color who was free, if not his whole life, then likely earlier than 1827). Much of what we know about Elizabeth comes from information related to her mother Fanny, who was enslaved originally by Benjamin Duvall, Jr., and later by Sarah Duvall beginning in 1801. At some point before 1827, Fanny likely married Charles Buchanan and the couple had four children: John, Elizabeth, Charles, Nicholas. As Fanny was enslaved, the four children of the couple were born into slavery with Sarah Duvall as their enslaver. It is possible that Fanny and her children may have resided with Charles during the period from 1813-26. On October 5, 1827, Sarah Duvall manumitted Fanny and her four children for one dollar. The next record of the family is in the 1830 census in which Charles Buchanan appears as the head of a family residing in the District of Columbia. Only Charles is mentioned by name, but the other individuals match the gender and ages of Fanny, John, Elizabeth, and Charles. It's unclear what happened to Nicholas. On September 10, 1830, Charles Buchanan wrote a will naming Frances [Fanny], John, Elizabeth, and Charles as his heirs. Charles died very shortly after around September 18, 1830. An Elizabeth Buchanan married a Black man named Isaac Landich in Washington, D.C. on May 14, 1840. Elizabeth Landich and her husband were then recorded as residing in Washington, D.C. in both the 1860 and 1880 U.S. Federal Census. It is likely that this individual was our Elizabeth Buchanan. We recommend this line of inquiry be pursued further.

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Elizabeth (aka Eliza) was the child of Amelia and Jacob Duckett, and all three individuals (and other family members) were enslaved by Gabriel Duvall. Although Elizabeth was never officially referred to as Elizabeth "Duckett", it's believed she potentially shared the same last name as her family. She was first recorded as enslaved by Gabriel Duvall in 1833 and assigned a monetary "value" of $120, likely meaning she was a child. She was born perhaps in the 1820s at Marietta and was later recorded among those believed to be the other children of Amelia and Jacob: Martha, Benjamin, Isaiah, Elias, Jane, Hezekiah, Eley, Margaret Ann. In his 1838 will, Gabriel bequeathed Elizabeth to his grandson Edmund B. Duval, Jr., but later changed his mind and bequeathed her to his grandson Marcus Duval per his 1840 will. Marcus became Elizabeth's new enslaver in 1844 after Gabriel's death. Marcus took control of the Old Mansion / Wigwam property when he reached his majority in 1845, and Elizabeth and her family likely moved from Marietta to Wigwam. In the censuses for 1850 and 1860 for Marcus Duval, there is an enslaved individual that is a potential match for Elizabeth. There are no known, available records pertaining to Elizabeth Duckett after the year 1860.

Description: SID research has led them to believe Elizabeth was born in the 1820s, although no record of Elizabeth's age exists and she was not assessed on tax records until 1833. Presumably, SID believes she was born before her sister Martha Duckett based upon her monetary "value" on the 1833 assessment.

Description: Upon the death of Gabriel Duvall in 1844, Marcus Duval would become Elizabeth's new enslaver. Marcus reached his majority in December of 1845 and took control of the estate he received from his father Edmund B. Duval, Sr., his mother Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, and his grandfather Gabriel Duvall. This included the northern half of the larger Marietta plantation that became known as Wigwam. Elizabeth most likely resided on Wigwam.

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Brown (born August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912) come through the ca. 1908 marriage of Calphus and Margaret's son William A. Brown to a woman named Louise (Lizie).

Biographical Narrative: Emily was born on February 24, 1840 at Marietta. Emily's mother Rachel [Jackson] and her grandmother Serena [Jackson] had been enslaved by Edmund B. Duval, Sr. until his death in 1831. Edmund's wife Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval selected Serena as part of her dower's thirds, and the remaining enslaved individuals not selected by Augusta were inherited by Edmund and Augusta's four children equally. Thus, Marcus Duval, Edmund B. Duval, Jr., Mary Frances Duval, and Gabriella Augusta Duval became Rachel's new enslavers in 1831. The bequest included any future children of Rachel; therefore, Emily was born enslaved by the four heirs. After the death of Augusta Duval in 1832, the heirs' grandfather Gabriel Duvall acted as the orphaned children's guardian and managed the financial affairs of their estate, and the lives of those they enslaved, until his grandchildren reached their majority. Gabriel hired out his grandchildren's enslaved individuals, including Emily's mother Rachel, and used their labor at Marietta. He compensated the heirs' estate for their use. Emily stayed at Marietta, presumably with her mother, in 1841 and 1842 as Gabriel noted her age next to Rachel's name during those years. The account book ends after the year 1842, and there are no known, available records pertaining to Emily after that year.

Additional Information

Edmund B. Duval, Sr. died intestate in 1831. The administration of Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s estate fell to his father, Gabriel Duvall. By law, Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s widow, Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, inherited her chosen one-third (her dower) of his enslaved persons. Augusta C. McCausland Duval died in October of 1832. At that time, the enslaved of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. and Augusta C. McCausland Duval were bequeathed to their four living children: Marcus Du Val, Edmund B. Duval, Jr., Mary Frances Duval, Gabriella Augusta Duval. Gabriel Duvall, grandfather of the said four heirs, was the manager and guardian of all their inherited enslaved persons until the four heirs reached their majorities. Documentation of Gabriel Duvall's personal accounts for the grandchildren survived and provided a fuller account of this group of enslaved individuals. Although there is evidence of enslaved ownership by Edmund B. Duval, Sr. that dated back to 1818, our only current understanding of the specifically named enslaved individuals of his estate is from 1831. We have no information at this time of their origins prior to their enslavement by Edmund B. Duval, Sr.

Currently, we have found no record of the enslaved of Marietta having come from the family of Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval. Augusta's father, Marcus McCausland, was recorded on the 1820 U.S. Federal Census as having five enslaved individuals in Baltimore County, Maryland. Marcus McCausland died in 1828 leaving everything to his wife and executrix, Mary Ann McCausland. The inventory of Marcus McCausland's estate recorded no enslaved. Mary Ann McCausland was recorded with no enslaved on the 1830 U.S. Federal Census. We have currently found no record of the whereabouts of those five enslaved individuals that were enumerated in 1820. No deed of purchase or deed of gift transferring ownership of an enslaved individual from the McCauslands to the Duvals was located.

Biographical Narrative: Little is known about this individual who was enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr., Sarah Duvall, and Delilah Duvall. She is not mentioned by name in the enslaved holdings of any of her enslavers. She first appears as enslaved by Benjamin Duvall between the years 1793-98. Then, from 1802-07, she appears in the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) household as being jointly enslaved by sisters Sarah and Delilah. Based on the order of names and positioning of individuals according to their ages and assessed values on the Personal Property Tax lists, it is likely that this enslaved female was the child of either [Enslaved Female - Name Unknown] (BDjr3) or [Enslaved Female - Name Unknown] (BDjr4). We do not know what happened to this individual after 1807, but she could have been sold, self-emancipated, or died.

Biographical Narrative: Very little is known about this enslaved individual as she was never identified by name in Duvall family enslavement records. We know that she was born between 1747-69 and was identified as being enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr. in 1783 at the Old Mansion / Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove). Biographical Narrative: Little is known about this individual who was initially enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr. prior to the writing of his will on May 17, 1794. Duvall does not provide this man's name in the will; he merely states he had previously given his daughter Susanna this enslaved man, who was of equal monetary "value" to the enslaved woman Ruth (DD1) and her three children that he bequeathed to his daughter Delilah Duvall. We do not know the year in which Susanna took possession of this man from her father, becoming the new enslaver.

 "To daughter Delilah after the death of her mother, one negro [sic] woman named Ruth & her three children (and future increase [sic]) which I deem equivalent to the negro [sic] man [BDjr24] which I have heretofore given to my son Benjamin, or to that given to my daughter Susanna [BDjr25]."

Notes: Although Duvall does not specifically indicate the enslaved person's gender, we can safely assume he was a man. The wording "equivalent to the negro man... given to my son Benjamin, or to that given to my daughter..." indicates both enslaved individuals were male. Additionally, the bequest of a female enslaved person to Susannah would not be monetarily equivalent to Ruth and her three children.

Biographical Narrative: Everlina was enslaved by Gabriel Duvall at Marietta. Although Everlina isn't listed by name on Gabriel's tax records until 1833, the tax records reflect an individual (name unknown) with a similar life trajectory to Everlina's at Marietta since 1819. At the 1833 assessment, Everlina was likely between 8 and 14 years old, placing her date of birth anywhere from 1819-25. It's possible that she was born on Duvall property and enslaved since birth. In his 1838 and 1840 wills, Gabriel bequeathed Everlina and her future children to his grandson Edmund B. Duval, Jr., who became Everlina's new enslaver after Gabriel's death in 1844. An 1844 estate inventory shows that Everlina had a very young child named Calphus [his surname given in later records was "Brown"], and it is likely that a child named Maria was her daughter. Later records indicate that Everlina likely had another son named Walter Brown, born around 1850-56. Edmund B. Duval, Jr. reached his majority in 1847 and took over Marietta, and Everlina most likely lived and labored there from 1844-60.

SID research identified an "Evaline Brown" enumerated in the 1870 census and living in the District of Columbia with a family group of other individuals with potential ties to Marietta. The household consisted of:

Robert Brown, 45 yrs, male, black, at home, born in Maryland
 Evaline Brown, 35 yrs, female, black, keeping House, born in Maryland
 Robert Brown, 16 yrs, male, black, drives [a] cart, born in Maryland
 Walter Brown, 13 yrs, male, black, driver, born in Maryland
 Rosa Brown, 8 yrs, female, black, at home, born in Maryland
 Jane Brown, 22 yrs, female, black, in service, born in Maryland

SID states more research is necessary to confirm that this was Everlina (GD221) and Walter Brown (EBDjr83) due to potential discrepancies. SID also suggests that the Robert Brown listed in the same census might be Robert (GD1153).

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Brown (born August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912) come through the ca. 1908 marriage of Calphus and Margaret's son William A. Brown to a woman named Louise (Lizie).

Date of Death: ☐ ? Place of Death:

Race: Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Fanny Buchanan was likely one of the children of Kate (BDjr26) who was originally enslaved by Benjamin Duvall Jr. We know Kate had at least three children by 1794, and she is first mentioned by name in Benjamin Duvall's will of that year, which states "Kate and her three children" (BDjr27, BDjr28, BDjr29, names all unknown) and any future children (SD23, name unknown; likely SD7, Fanny Buchanan) were bequeathed to his daughter Sarah Duvall. Although she is not mentioned by name, Benjamin's 1800 tax records indicate Fanny was likely born sometime between 1794-1800. She remained enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr., until his death in 1801, at which time Sarah Duvall became her new enslaver. Sarah continued living at the Old Mansion / Wigwam, where she was taxed for an enslaved individual matching Fanny's life trajectory for the years 1802-12. There are no known available records pertaining to Fanny for the period 1813-26. Although there is a gap in Sarah Duvall's Personal Property Tax records, we believe this could be attributed to the process of hiring out enslaved individuals, that both Sarah Duvall and her sister Delilah Duvall appeared to have been engaged in. At some point before 1827, Fanny married Charles Buchanan (identified as a person of color, likely free by 1827), and the couple had four children: John Buchanan, Elizabeth Buchanan, Charles Buchanan, Nicholas Buchanan. It is possible that Fanny and her children may have resided with Charles Buchanan during the period from 1813-26. On October 5, 1827, Sarah Duvall manumitted Fanny and her children for one dollar. Fanny and her family next appear in the 1830 census as residing in the District of Columbia, although only Charles Buchanan is mentioned by name. The other individuals matched the genders and ages of Fanny, John, Elizabeth, and Charles. It's unknown what happened to Nicholas. On September 10, 1830, Charles Buchanan wrote a will naming Frances [Fanny], John, Elizabeth, and Charles as his heirs. Charles died shortly thereafter on September 18, 1830. There are no known, available records pertaining to Fanny Buchanan following the year 1830. Of note, there were no listings for Buckanans (or any derivative spelling thereof) in the District of Columbia "Registry of Free Negroes [sic]."

Biographical Narrative: Aaron's father (name unknown) was enslaved by a Mrs. Carroll in Annapolis, MD. His son Aaron was born circa 1792, likely in Annapolis, as a newspaper notice indicates Aaron was raised there (possibly also enslaved by Mrs. Carroll, but there is no documentation of that). At some point, Mrs. Carroll moved to Baltimore, and the notice states that it's likely Aaron's father was also taken to Baltimore. There is no further information about Aaron's father at this time.

Description: Aaron's father is documented in Aaron's self-emancipation notice: "Fifty Dollars Reward, Will be paid by the subscriber for the apprehension of negro [sic] AARON, who ran away on Saturday evening, the 27th instant. He is a low, square and chunky built fellow, about 23 years of age and about 5 feet 4 inches high, with small eyes, thick lips, large hands and feet; and is an artful fellow- His clothing when he left home was old and much worn, of homemade cloth; and as I have reason to believe he was driven away through the fear of an unjust accusation by a fellow having a wife at my house, I believe that it was not a premeditated act and that he has not changed his clothing; as he has absented himself without any cause from my overseer or myself, but thro' the threatening of a slave belonging to another person, I will look over this offence, provided he returns immediately to his duty. Aaron was raised in Annapolis, and has a father there, belonging to Mrs. Carroll, and as she has removed to Baltimore, it is likely his father was also taken to that place. He was purchased by me from Judge Duvall late of Washington city, but now residing in Prince George's county, where his relations are. He will probably make for one or other of these places. If taken in this county, I will give ten dollars, if out of the county and in the state or in the District of Columbia, 25 dollars, and if out of the state, the above reward, upon his being secured in jail, so that I get him again, and reasonable additional charges, if brought home. GRAFTON DUVAL June 3."

Biographical Narrative: Per the tax records of Benjamin Duvall, Jr., this female child (name unknown) of Kate was born between 1786-92, likely at the Old Mansion / Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove). Since her mother Kate was enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr., this female child would have been born enslaved. We know Kate had at least three children by 1794, and she is first mentioned by name in Benjamin Duvall's will of that year, which states "Kate and her three children" (BDjr27, BDjr28, BDjr29, names all unknown) and any future children (SD23, name unknown; likely SD7, Fanny Buchanan) were bequeathed to his daughter Sarah Duvall. Kate's female child matches the description of an individual (name unknown) that continued to be enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr. at the Old Mansion until 1800. After Benjamin's death in 1801, this female child's new enslaver was Sarah Duvall. Sarah continued living at the Old Mansion / Wigwam, where she was taxed for an enslaved individual matching this female child's description for the years 1802-08. There are no known, available records pertaining to this female child of Kate after the year 1808. It is unknown at this time if this enslaved individual died, self-emancipated, or was sold by Sarah Duvall.

Date of Birth: ☒ 1780 Place of Birth:

Date of Death: ☐ ? Place of Death:

Race: Black Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics: Height: 6'

Biographical Narrative: Frank was born circa 1780, although there is no information on where he was born or whether he was born into slavery. Prior to being enslaved by "G. Duvall," (likely Gabriel Duvall), in 1810, his enslaver was a man named Dr. Fendall. Dr. Fendall sold Frank to "G. Duvall" around 1810. Frank performed several different types of work: taking care of horses, carriage driver, and gardener. Frank self-emancipated on April 25, 1814 and was still free on August 20, 1814, when the runaway advertisement ran again in the newspaper. Frank does not appear on Gabriel Duvall's 1833 Personal Property Tax list which identified all enslaved by name. If Frank was indeed acquired by Duvall, he may have been successful in his bid for freedom. Additionally, if eventually re-captured and re-enslaved, Gabriel might have sold Frank prior to 1833, or Frank may have died.

Biographical Narrative: George was likely born at Marietta in the year 1835 to one of the women already enslaved by Gabriel Duvall. He was first mentioned by name in Gabriel's 1838 will, where Gabriel bequeathed him to his grandson Marcus Duval. In the new will he wrote in 1840, Gabriel again bequeathed George to Marcus. However, in an 1843 codicil to the 1840 will, Gabriel changed his mind and instead gave George to his granddaughter Gabriella Augusta Duval. Gabriel stated that George had already been devised by deed of gift to Gabriella, although the deed was not recorded. George next appears in the 1844 inventory of Gabriel's estate, where he was assigned a monetary "value" of $250.00. According to her guardianship accounts, after being enslaved by Gabriella, George was hired out during the years 1846, 1847, and 1848. It is not known where or to whom. Gabriella appears in the 1850 U.S. Federal Census as residing at Marietta with her brother Edmund B. Duval, Jr., but it is not known if George remained at Marietta with her. There are no further records mentioning him by name after the year 1848.

Duval, Gabriella Augusta, 7/18/1831 to 10/6/1879 (GAD)	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	1843-44	As stated in the 1843 codicil to Gabriel Duvall's will, Gabriella became George's new enslaver via a deed of gift from Gabriel. The exact date of the transfer of George from Gabriel to Gabriella is unknown, as the deed was unrecorded. Since George was assessed in the 1844 inventory of Gabriel's estate, the deed may have been written to take effect after Gabriel's death.

Biographical Narrative: Little is known about Hannibal other than that he was enslaved by Gabriel Duvall at Marietta, and may have been enslaved on Duvall property since 1802. Based on Gabriel's 1833 Personal Property Tax record and Hannibal's assigned monetary "value" of $250, he would have been an adult male between the ages of 14 and 45 at that time. Thus, his estimated date of birth spans a wide range of years, from 1788-1819. It's unknown whether he was born at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) or if he was purchased later by Gabriel. In Gabriel Duvall's 1838 unrecorded will, Hannibal was bequeathed to Gabriel's grandson, Marcus Duval, but that is the last time he appears by name in the records. Since he wasn't identified in Gabriel's 1840 will, Hannibal was most likely sold, had died, or had self-emancipated before 1840.

Biographical Narrative: Harriet was born circa 1842, likely at Marietta. Her enslaver was Gabriella Augusta Duval, although Gabriella had not yet reached her majority. Therefore, Gabriella's brother Edmund B. Duval, Jr., billed Gabriella's executor (George W. Duvall) for "taking care of" and "supporting" Harriet monetarily in 1846 and 1847. For "child" Harriet to be enslaved by Gabriella Augusta Duval in 1846, Harriet would have had to have been the daughter of one of Gabriella Augusta Duval's female enslaved individuals. Harriet was likely either the daughter of Martha Duckett (GD1172) or Cary Jackson (EBDsr9). Unfortunately, there are no known records referring to Harriet by name after 1847.

Marietta Associated: ☒ Checking the "Marietta Associated" box means this individual was enslaved at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) OR at Marietta.

Name: Harry Wallace (GD31) Gender: Male Religion:

Date of Birth: ☒ 1778 Place of Birth: Queen Anne's County, MD

Date of Death: ☐ Place of Death:

Race: Black Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics: Height: 5' 2"

Biographical Narrative: Harry Wallace (aka Henry) self-emancipated from the Old Mansion (aka Darnall's Grove and what would become Marietta). In an effort to re-enslave Harry, Gabriel placed notices in Easton, Maryland's "Herald and Eastern Shore Intelligencer" describing him. A notice dated April 9, 1801 (found in a May 12, 1801 edition of the paper) states Harry self-emancipated "Saturday last," meaning he left on Saturday, April 4, 1801. The newspaper advertisements continued to run through September 8, 1801. According to the notice, Harry was born around 1778 in Queen Anne's County. It's unclear from the notice who exactly was the legal enslaver of Harry prior to Gabriel Duvall. It could have been Richard B. Lloyd [possibly Richard Bennett Lloyd, who died in 1787], or a family member of said Lloyd. The Lloyd family was likely the only previous enslaver as Gabriel Duvall remarked that Harry was born "in the [Lloyd] family" and could likely be heading back there after self-emancipating. Harry had a brother (name unknown) and other relatives at the Lloyds'. No other previous or intermediary enslaver was mentioned. Of note is that Harry had an acknowledged wife (name unknown), identified as being enslaved by Mr. Baldwin. Mr. Baldwin was likely Thomas Baldwin, a local tavern owner who operated a tavern at the intersection of Route 450 and Enterprise Road from the late 1700s into the early 1800s. It is unknown when Harry arrived at Duvall's property, but the acknowledgment of a nearby wife alludes to Harry being there for a reasonable amount of time. In the notice, Gabriel Duvall claims that Harry's wife stole money from her enslaver's wife [Mrs. Baldwin], some of which was found in Harry's possession, and this is what prompted him to leave. It is unknown if Henry was ever found and re-enslaved by Gabriel.

Ran away from the subscriber's plantation near Mr. Baldwin's tavern, in Prince-George's county, on Saturday last, a likely young negro [sic] fellow named HARRY: he sometimes calls himself Henry Wallace. He is a likely black smooth faced young man, about 23 years of age, about 5 feet 2 inches high, straight and well made, He speaks in a slow and careless manner, sometimes hesitates, and when alarmed, stammers, and when made angry, his eyes have a redish cast. He had on and took with him a coarse felt hat, half worn, & rather high crowned, a dy'd cotton great coat almost new, with metal buttons a coarse dark colored jacket with full cape, and large metal buttons, three oznabrig shirts, a white gingham coat, green kersey overalls, having a small patch on the left knee; several waistcoats, one of which is a swandown, and a pair of short stockings. He is smart and active, can wrestle, box, beat a drum, sing and dance very well. His wife, the property of Mr. Baldwin, has been lately detected in stealing 15 or 20 dollars from her mistress, a part of which was found on Harry, and he fearing the consequences, made his escape. As it is probable he is not without cash, he may change his cloths; and it is likely he will change his name. He was born in Queen Ann's county, in the family of the late Richard B. Lloyd, Esq. and has a brother and other relations there. Whoever will apprehend Harry and secure him in gaol or otherwise, so that I may get him again, shall receive a reward of Thirty Dollars. All matters of vessels are cautioned against carrying him away. Gabriel Duvall. April 9, 1801."

Notes: Although Harry left on April 4, 1801, the notice first appeared in the May 12, 1801 (and subsequent) editions of this newspaper until September 8, 1801.

Name: Henny Black (DD8) Gender: Female Religion:

Date of Birth: ☒ ca? 1813 Place of Birth: Likely at the Old Mansion / Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove), Prince George's County, MD

Date of Death: ☐ Place of Death:

Race: Black Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: As her mother Jane Black was enslaved by Delilah Duvall, Henny Black was born into enslavement circa 1813, likely at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove). Henny's three children Charles Black (born ca. 1830), Joseph Black (born ca. 1833), and Lucy Black (born ca. 1835) were all born enslaved by Delilah. On May 13, 1836, Delilah Duvall wrote a deed of manumission, which would free Henny, Henny's mother Jane, and Henny's three children upon the death of Delilah. The deed also included freedom for any future children of Henny. However, after Delilah's death in 1839, tax records indicate an enslaved person thought to be Henny Black still at the Old Mansion through 1841. Henny was likely manumitted circa 1842-43, as a sworn statement was given by a Richard Smith to the Prince George's County Court on September 17, 1843, attesting that Jane and Henny Black were manumitted by Delilah Duvall's death. After receiving freedom, Henny likely moved to Washington, D.C. with her mother Jane as census records from 1850 show a "Hannah" Black living with a woman named "J. Black" and a child named Joseph Black. The 1860 census lists a Henrietta Black living with a Jane Black. There is also a Jane Black and Joseph Black listed in the 1870 census for D.C., but Henny is not mentioned.

Date of Death: ☐ 12/2/1891?

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Hezekiah was the child of Amelia and Jacob Duckett, and all three individuals (and other family members) were enslaved by Gabriel Duval. Hezekiah doesn't appear in Gabriel's 1838 or 1840 wills, but he does appear in the 1844 estate inventory after Gabriel's death; therefore, Hezekiah was likely born between 1840-44. There is no specific bequest relating to Hezekiah by name since he doesn't appear in either will; however, the 1840 will states that any future children of Amelia were also to be enslaved by Marcus Duval. Hezekiah was recorded among those believed to be the other children of Amelia and Jacob: Elizabeth, Martha, Benjamin, Eley, Isaiah, Elias, Jane, Margaret Ann. After Gabriel's death, Hezekiah's new enslaver was likely Marcus Duval. Marcus reached his majority in December of 1845 and took control of the estate he received from his father Edmund B. Duval, Sr., his mother Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, and his grandfather Gabriel Duval. This included the northern half of the larger Marietta plantation that became known as Wigwam. Hezekiah likely lived and labored at Wigwam, although there are no records indicating this. Hezekiah next appears in the 1878 Washington, D.C. City Directory as a laborer residing in Willowtree Alley Southwest. Jacob Duckett was also living in that area in 1878. The 1880 census indicates Hezekiah (age 40) lived at 312 Willow Tree Alley with his wife Rebecca (age 35), his daughter Eliza (age 13), his son Edward (age 7), and his son Joseph (age 4). His occupation was laborer and Rebecca's was laundress. All household members were born in Maryland. From 1884-89 (not inclusive) in the city directories, Hezekiah is still listed at the same address with the same occupation. There is a death record for a Hezekiah Duckett stating he died on September 2, 1891 at the age of 45. If this is the same Hezekiah Duckett, he was buried in Graceland Cemetery on September 4, 1891. There is a 6 year difference in the ages given between this death record, the 1844 estate inventory, and the 1880 census. Per the death record Hezekiah would have been born in 1846, but Hezekiah wasn't accounted for in Gabriel's 1844 estate. Per the 1880 census, Hezekiah would have been born in 1840, which, if born after September 1840, would explain why he wasn't included in Gabriel's 1840 will. Further research might be worthwhile.

☒ 1844

Although Hezekiah was born after 1840 and didn't appear in Gabriel's 1840 bequests, the terms of his will include any future children born to Amelia. Hezekiah was most likely enslaved under Marcus Duval after Gabriel's death in 1844.

☐ 1844 (perhaps 1840)

Hezekiah did not appear in Gabriel's 1838 or 1840 wills, but he does appear in the 1844 estate inventory. Therefore, he was born between 1840-44. As his parents were enslaved, Hezekiah would have been born enslaved at Marietta.

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Brown (born August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912) come through the ca. 1908 marriage of Calphus and Margaret's son William A. Brown to a woman named Louise (Lizie).

Date of Death: ☐ Place of Death:

Biographical Narrative: Isaiah was the child of Amelia and Jacob Duckett, and all three individuals (and other family members) were enslaved by Gabriel Duvall. Although Isaiah was never officially referred to as Isaiah "Duckett", it's believed he potentially shared the same last name as his family. Isaiah doesn't appear in Gabriel's 1838 will, but he does appear in the 1840 will; therefore, he was likely born between 1838-40. Per the 1840 will, Gabriel bequeathed Isaiah to his grandson Edmund B. Duval, Jr. After Gabriel's death in 1844, Isaiah appears on the estate inventory, recorded among those believed to be the other children of Amelia and Jacob: Elizabeth, Martha, Benjamin, Elias, Jane, Hezekiah, Eley, Margaret Ann. It is most likely that Edmund became Isaiah's new enslaver per Gabriel's wishes, but there are no known, available records pertaining to Isaiah after the 1844 estate inventory. It's also possible he had died, was sold by Marcus, or self-emancipated.

Description: Isaiah was assessed in the 1844 inventory of Gabriel Duvall's estate and assigned a monetary "value" of $175.00. Isaiah was recorded among those believed to be the other children of Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165): Elizabeth (GD1171), Martha (GD1172), Benjamin (GD1157), Eley (GD230), Elias (GD196), Jane (GD233), Hezekiah (GD234), Margaret (GD226).

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Brown (born August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912) come through the ca. 1908 marriage of Calphus and Margaret's son William A. Brown to a woman named Louise (Lizie).

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Jack was enslaved by Reverend Jacob Henderson (and possibly Henry Ridgely) and may have been related to a family unit involving an enslaved woman named Easter. Easter was enslaved by Mareen Duvall, Henry Ridgely, and Jacob Henderson. Jack's name appears in an 1800 freedom petition involving Jacob Henderson and descendants of Easter, in which Mareen Duvall's two grandsons Benjamin Duvall and Benjamin "Marsh" Duvall gave testimony that their grandfather had enslaved Easter. They also provide information on Easter's daughter (Cate) and grandchildren (Rachel and Barbary), with Benjamin "Marsh" stating "that he never heard of negro [sic] Cates being free but had always understood that Easter the mother of Cate, as well Cate and her children Rachel and Barbary were Slaves." There is a possibility that Jack was Easter's spouse / partner and Cate's father, as Benjamin Duvall stated, "he knew many of the slaves of the said Henderson, particularly two called Jack and Easter." Additionally, on Ridgely's 1710 estate inventory, there is an Ester heading the list of enslaved women. In the same inventory is a man named Jack heading the list of enslaved men. This may indicate that the two were a couple. A one-year-old girl child (name not listed) is also in the inventory. Since Easter's daughter Cate was born circa 1711, it's possible this girl child is Cate, but this is merely a hypothesis with no other documentation to confirm the theory. Whether they were related or not, Easter, Jack, and Cate (and Cate's children Rachel and Barbary) all lived on Henderson's land named Catton Plantation in Prince George's County, MD. Jack does not appear on the 1752 estate inventory taken after Jacob Henderson's death, but Jack may have been deceased, sold away, or self-emancipated by that date.

Description: POSSIBLE documentation -- A man named Jack was given a monetary "value" of £30 in the 1710 inventory taken after Henry Ridgely's death. It's possible that this is the same Jack who was later enslaved by Rev. Jacob Henderson (Mary Duvall Ridgely's third husband).
Documented	Unknown	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	1735-53	<input type="checkbox"/>	Prince George's County, MD
Description: Depositions taken in the year 1800 relate to a claim for freedom based on white parentage and were given by Susanna Grey, a neighbor of Rev. Jacob Henderson's; Benjamin Duvall "Marsh," son of Mareen the Younger and grandson of Mareen the Emigrant; and Benjamin Duvall, son of Benjamin Duvall, Sr., grandson of Mareen the Emigrant, and father of Gabriel Duvall. The three deponents state they never heard any of Henderson's enslaved individuals were entitled to or claimed freedom, and they never heard of a white or mixed-race child in the family of Henderson or left at Henderson's residence. Although the historical record doesn't mention who filed the freedom suit, the case relates to a woman named Easter, her daughter Cate, and Cate's children Rachel and Barbary. Rachel and Barbary were fathered by a white Irish servant in Henderson's household. Further research might shed light on this intriguing story, including the names of the individuals suing for their freedom. Newman states "it was proved . . . that they had been sired by a white Irishman of a negro [sic] slave, so consequently all issue by law were declared to have been non-free born." This indicates Rachel and Barbary were the petitioners, but Newman doesn't list his source for the settlement of the case, if it was indeed formally settled. Jack is mentioned in the depositions as well as Benjamin Duvall stated, "he knew many of the slaves of the said Henderson, particularly two called Jack and Easter."

Biographical Narrative: Jacob was enslaved by Mareen Duvall at Middle Plantation in Anne Arundel County, MD, and appears in the 1694 appraisal of Mareen's estate after his death. He was listed as a boy with a monetary "value" of £26. SID indicates he was likely born on Middle Plantation, but there is no research to support that conclusion. While some of Mareen's enslaved individuals were retained by his wife Mary, Jacob was not. A 1695 account of Mareen's estate taken by his son John Duvall, Richard Snowden, and John Hammond, reveals that Jacob was sold for £26 to a man named James Lewis in 1695. Prior to the sale of Jacob in 1695, his enslaver might have been either Mary Duvall Ridgely Henderson (MDRH) or Lewis Duvall (who inherited the other 300 acres of Mareen's estate). There is no further record of Jacob after 1695, but further research into his new enslaver James Lewis might reveal to where Jacob was taken.

Biographical Narrative: Jacob Duckett was enslaved by Gabriel Duvall at Marietta. Although Jacob isn't listed by name on Gabriel's tax records until 1833, the tax records reflect an individual (name unknown) with a similar life trajectory to Jacob's at the Old Mansion / Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) and later Marietta since 1800. As he was born around 1800, it's possible that Jacob was born on Duvall property and enslaved since birth. Jacob married a woman named Amelia, who was also enslaved by Gabriel Duvall. Their children were: Elizabeth, Martha, Benjamin, Isaiah, Elias, Jane, Hezekiah, Eley, Margaret Ann. Most, if not all, the children were likely born into enslavement at Marietta. In his 1838 and 1840 wills, Gabriel bequeathed Jacob to his grandson Marcus Duval, and Marcus became Jacob's new enslaver in 1844 after Gabriel's death. Marcus took control of the Old Mansion / Wigwam property when he reached his majority in 1845, and Jacob and his family likely moved from Marietta to Wigwam. After emancipation, Jacob and his family moved to Washington, D.C., where Jacob worked as a brickmaker and laborer. In 1867, Jacob and Amelia's daughter Margaret Ann married Calphus Brown (son of Everlina), who was also previously enslaved by the Duvalls. Their children William Brown and Elias Brown were Jacob's grandchildren. Jacob and Amelia's son Hezekiah married a woman named Rebecca, and their children Eliza, Edward, and Joseph were Jacob's grandchildren as well. There are no known, available records pertaining to Jacob Duckett after 1887.

Description:		Upon the death of Gabriel Duvall in 1844, Marcus Duval would become Jacob's new enslaver. Marcus reached his majority in December of 1845 and took control of the estate he received from his father Edmund B. Duval, Sr., his mother Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, and his grandfather Gabriel Duvall. This included the northern half of the larger Marietta plantation that became known as Wigwam. Jacob Duckett most likely resided on Wigwam. His wife, Amelia (GD1165), and their children, Elizabeth (GD1171), Elias (GD196), Jane (GD233), Hezekiah (GD234), and Margaret (GD226) were most likely with Jacob (GD1151) at Wigwam.

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Brown (born August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912) come through the ca. 1908 marriage of Calphus and Margaret's son William A. Brown to a woman named Louise (Lizie).

Gender: Male

Religion:

Date of Birth: ☒ 1823-24

Place of Birth:

Date of Death: ☐ ?

Place of Death:

Race: Black

Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics: Height: 5' 6"

Biographical Narrative: Born circa 1823-24, James was the son of Nancy and both were enslaved by Edmund Bryce Duval, Sr. at the Old Mansion / Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove). An 1844 newspaper advertisement describes James's complexion with the derogatory word "yellow [sic]," which may indicate he was of mixed race. When Edmund, Sr. died in 1831, his widow Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval chose Nancy and James as part of her one-third (dower) of his enslaved persons. When Augusta died in 1832, James appeared on the 1832 inventory of her estate. He then became jointly enslaved by Edmund, Sr. and Augusta's sons Edmund Bryce Duval, Jr. and Marcus Duval. Edmund and Marcus's estate and enslaved individuals were managed by Gabriel Duvall until the children became of age. Between 1832-42, James was frequently hired out from the estate and most likely worked in the house. He self-emancipated on May 5, 1844, but an 1845 estate account authorizing a $38 payment "for advertising & reward for apprehending" Jim seems to indicate he was captured. The records do not clarify whether he was brought back to Marietta and enslaved again by Marcus and Edmund. He may have been sold.

Marietta

Description: Soon after the death of Gabriel Duvall, a notice was placed by George Washington Duvall, the executor of Gabriel Duvall's estate. It reported that Jim had self-emancipated from Marietta on May 5, 1844.

"ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS REWARD. Ranaway the 5th inst., a likely yellow [sic] fellow named JIM, about 19 years old, 5 feet 6 inches high, very bushy head; he has been accustomed to work in the house, and is a very likely fellow. As he went away without provocation, it is likely he will endeavor to reach a free State. The above reward will be given if taken out of the State, and $50 if taken in the state, and $25 if taken in the county or District of Columbia. In either event he must be brought home or secured so that I obtain possession. G.W. DUVALL, Executor of Judge Duvall, near Good Luck P.O., Prince George's county, Md. Description: Gabriel Duvall's executor, George W. Duvall recorded a payment of $38.00 "for advertising & reward for apprehending negro [sic] Jim," in the Estate Account for the estate of Gabriel Duvall. The available records do not clarify whether Jim was sold or returned to Marietta and again enslaved by Marcus Duval and Edmund B. Duval, Jr.

Additional Information

Edmund B. Duval, Sr. died intestate in 1831. The administration of Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s estate fell to his father, Gabriel Duvall. By law, Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s widow, Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, inherited her chosen one-third (her dower) of his enslaved persons. Augusta C. McCausland Duval died in October of 1832. At that time, the enslaved of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. and Augusta C. McCausland Duval were bequeathed to their four living children: Marcus Du Val, Edmund B. Duval, Jr., Mary Frances Duval, Gabriella Augusta Duval. Gabriel Duvall, grandfather of the said four heirs, was the manager and guardian of all their inherited enslaved persons until the four heirs reached their majorities. Documentation of Gabriel Duvall's personal accounts for the grandchildren survived and provided a fuller account of this group of enslaved individuals. Although there is evidence of enslaved ownership by Edmund B. Duval, Sr. that dated back to 1818, our only current understanding of the specifically named enslaved individuals of his estate is from 1831. We have no information at this time of their origins prior to their enslavement by Edmund B. Duval, Sr.

Currently, we have found no record of the enslaved of Marietta having come from the family of Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval. Augusta's father, Marcus McCausland, was recorded on the 1820 U.S. Federal Census as having five enslaved individuals in Baltimore County, Maryland. Marcus McCausland died in 1828 leaving everything to his wife and executrix, Mary Ann McCausland. The inventory of Marcus McCausland's estate recorded no enslaved. Mary Ann McCausland was recorded with no enslaved on the 1830 U.S. Federal Census. We have currently found no record of the whereabouts of those five enslaved individuals that were enumerated in 1820. No deed of purchase or deed of gift transferring ownership of an enslaved individual from the McCauslands to the Duvals was located.

Biographical Narrative: Jane was the child of Amelia and Jacob Duckett, and all three individuals (and other family members) were enslaved by Gabriel Duvall. Although Jane was never officially referred to as Jane "Duckett", it's believed she potentially shared the same last name as her family. Jane doesn't appear in Gabriel's 1838 or 1840 wills, but she does appear in the 1844 estate inventory after his death; therefore, she was likely born between 1840-44. There is no specific bequest relating to Jane by name since she doesn't appear in either will; however, the 1840 will states that any future children of Amelia were to be enslaved by Marcus. On the estate inventory of 1844, Jane is recorded among those believed to be the other children of Amelia and Jacob: Elizabeth, Martha, Benjamin, Isaiah, Elias, Hezekiah, Eley, Margaret Ann. After Gabriel's death, Jane's new enslaver was likely Marcus Duval. Marcus reached his majority in December of 1845 and took control of the estate he received from his father Edmund B. Duval, Sr., his mother Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, and his grandfather Gabriel Duvall. This included the northern half of the larger Marietta plantation that became known as Wigwam. There are no known, available records pertaining to Jane after 1844, so it's unknown whether Jane moved to Wigwam to live and labor or whether Jane died or was sold by Marcus.

Description: Jane was assessed in the 1844 inventory of Gabriel Duvall's estate and assigned a monetary "value" of $100.00. Jane was recorded among those believed to be the other children of Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165): Elizabeth (GD1171), Martha (GD1172), Benjamin (GD1157), Eley (GD230), Isaiah (GD207), Elias (GD196), Hezekiah (GD234), Margaret (GD226).

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Brown (born August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912) come through the ca. 1908 marriage of Calphus and Margaret's son William A. Brown to a woman named Louise (Lizie).

Biographical Narrative: Thomas Butler, his wife Sarah Butler, and their children Lydia, Jane, and Sally were enslaved by John Dells (or Dales) some time prior to 1799. At various times from 1799-1805, the Butler family lived with Dells in Maryland, Virginia, and the Georgetown neighborhood in Washington, D.C. Dells hired out Thomas and Sarah to Thomas Gossum in Virginia and to Christian Getzendanner in Georgetown. Around 1805 or earlier, Dells sold Thomas and Sarah's children Lydia and Jane away from the family. No record of their sale or their new enslaver has been found.

Name: Jane Black (BDjr23) Gender: Female Religion:

Date of Birth: ☒ ca? 1793 Place of Birth: Likely at the Old Mansion / Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove), Prince George's County, MD

Date of Death: ☐ Place of Death:

Race: Black Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: As her mother Ruth was enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr. by 1794 (possibly 1783), Jane Black was born into enslavement circa 1793, likely at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove). We know Ruth had at least three children by 1794, and she is first mentioned in Benjamin Duvall's will of that year, which states "Ruth and her three children" [BDjr21 - name unknown, BDjr22 - name unknown, BDjr23 - Jane Black] and future children [DD12 - name unknown, DD6 - Moses Black, DD13 - name unknown; DD18 - name unknown] would pass to his daughter, Delilah Duvall. Jane was enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr. from 1796-1801. Upon Benjamin's death circa January 24, 1801, Jane's new enslaver became Delilah Duvall. From 1802-07, Jane likely lived and worked at the Old Mansion, but between 1808-12 there are no records pertaining to Jane. It is possible that she was hired out during this period, because from 1813-35, she was once again listed in Delilah Duvall's holdings. In most of these records she is listed as Jane, but in 1833, Delilah Duvall's tax record listed a "Jenny" that is believed to be Jane Black. Sometime around 1813, Jane gave birth to a daughter named Henny Black. On May 13, 1836, Delilah Duvall wrote a deed of manumission, which would free the then 43-year-old Jane, her daughter Henny, and Jane's grandchildren once Delilah died. However, after Delilah's death in 1839, tax records indicate an enslaved person thought to be Jane Black still at the Old Mansion until 1841. She was likely manumitted circa 1842-43, as a sworn statement was given by a Richard Smith to the Prince George's County Court on September 17, 1843, attesting that Jane and Henny Black were manumitted by Delilah Duvall's death. After receiving freedom, Jane and her family likely moved to Washington, D.C. where census records from 1850, 1860, and 1870 show a Jane Black living with a Hannah or Henrietta (Henny) and a Joseph Black.

Additional Information

Likely members of this family group begin with: Airey (BDjr18) and Robin (BDjr19). Likely children of Airey and Robin are: [Enslaved Female] (BDjr3), [Enslaved Female] (BDjr4), Kate (BDjr26), Ruth (DD1). [Enslaved Female] (BDjr13) is likely the child of either [Enslaved Female] (BDjr3) OR [Enslaved Female] (BDjr4). Known children of Kate are: [Female Child of Kate] (BDjr27), [Male Child of Kate] (BDjr28), [Male Child of Kate] (BDjr29), [Child of Kate] (SD23). Likely child of Kate: Fanny Buchanan (SD7) m. Charles Buchanan (CBFree). Known children of Fanny and Charles are: John Buchanan (SD8), Elizabeth Buchanan (SD9) likely m. Isaac Landich (ILFree), Charles Buchanan (SD10), Nicholas Buchanan (SD11). Known children of Ruth are: [Male child of Ruth] (BDjr21), [Male child of Ruth] (BDjr22), [Child of Ruth] (DD12), Moses Black (DD6), [Child of Ruth] (DD13), [Child of Ruth] (DD18), Jane Black (BDjr23). Known child of Jane Black is: Henny Black (DD8). Known children of Henny Black are: Charles Black (DD9), Joseph Black (DD10), Lucy Black (DD11).

In 1820, there was a free Black household enumerated in the U.S. Federal Census in Vansville, Prince George's County, Maryland. A Joseph Black was listed as the head of household. Enumerated in said household was one free Black woman over the age of 45 and one free Black male over the age of 45. One of these individuals was identified as working in manufacturing. Further research is necessary to establish if this household was connected to the enslaved family of Jane Black on nearby Marietta. The 1820 Census also provided evidence of what appeared to have been a free Black community in the immediate neighborhood of Darnall's Grove and Marietta. There were several free Black households which included both Shorter and Black families.

Biographical Narrative: On August 1, 1801, Jeffry, along with a young boy named Stephen (GD30) and a gray gelding, was mortgaged for £78 to Gabriel Duvall by his presumed owner, Walter Wyvill Norman of Anne Arundel County. The mortgage was not recorded, however, and it's not known whether Norman paid the mortgage before its due date of November 10, 1801. Therefore, it remains unclear whether Gabriel Duvall officially became Jeffry's enslaver. Gabriel is listed as a possible enslaver. Jeffry does not appear on Gabriel's 1833 Personal Property tax list that identified all enslaved people by first name. If he was enslaved by Gabriel, he was either sold, had died, or had self-emancipated prior to 1833.

Description: In 1801, Walter Wyvill Norman, of Anne Arundel County, Maryland, mortgaged for £78, the following to Gabriel Duvall: "one negro [sic] man named Jeffry aged about 45 years, one negro [sic] boy named Stephen about 12 years old and one gray gelding." The mortgage was to be canceled if Norman paid Duvall, on or before November 10, 1801, the said £78 with legal interest and deed recording costs. The mortgage was not recorded and it is not known if Walter Wyvill Norman paid off his debt, hence, we do not know for certain whether or not the legal ownership of Jeffry was ever conveyed to Gabriel Duvall.

Biographical Narrative: Jemey (likely pronounced 'Jaime'), was enslaved by Mareen Duvall at Middle Plantation in Anne Arundel County, MD, and appears in the 1694 appraisal of Mareen's estate after his death with a monetary "value" of £6. He was likely a young boy, and may have been the offspring of one of Mareen Duvall's enslaved females. Mareen did not bequeath any of his enslaved individuals to his son Benjamin Duvall, Sr., so Jemey and his potential descendants likely had no ties to the Old Mansion/Wigwam or Marietta. When Mareen's widow Mary Duvall remarried to Henry Ridgely, she took some of Mareen's enslaved individuals with her to Catton Plantation. Jemey does not appear in the 1710 inventory of Henry Ridgely's estate, however, so it's unclear whether Jemey went to Catton Plantation. He may have been sold, died, or self-emancipated prior to that date.

Biographical Narrative: Joe was born circa 1783, although the location of his birth and his freedom status at birth are unknown. It's possible he was born in the District of Columbia, as his enslaver in 1805 was from there. On April 3, 1805, Alexander S. Smoot (of the District of Columbia) mortgaged Joe to Gabriel Duvall (of the District of Columbia) for $80 plus interest. Joe was 22 years old at the time. The mortgage was to be canceled if Smoot paid Duvall on or before April 1, 1806. It is not known if Smoot paid off his debt, hence, it's uncertain whether the legal ownership of Joe was ever conveyed to Gabriel Duvall.

NOTE: SID research stated "Later on in the historic record, we identified another enslaved individual named Joe (GD1149) that seems to match the earlier records and trajectory of Joe (GD32). Based on the available evidence, we are confident that these two men are indeed one individual and will proceed with the identifier of Joe (GD32)." However, an examination of the historical record reveals that Joe (GD32) was documented as age 22 in an 1805 mortgage (thus, born circa 1783) and Joe (GD1532) was documented as age 39 in an 1837 newspaper notice (thus, born circa 1798). The 15-year gap in their ages makes it unlikely that they were the same person. Therefore, we are considering them as two different people who happen to share the same name.

Date of Birth: ☒ 1798 Place of Birth:

Date of Death: ☐ Place of Death:

Race: Black Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics: Height: 5' 10"

Biographical Narrative: Joe was born circa 1798, although the location of his birth and his freedom status at birth are unknown. The names of his parents are unknown, but Joe had two brothers: Tom (formerly enslaved by Mr. Ritchie of Frederick, MD, but now a free man) and Phil (enslaved by Mr. Kennedy of Baltimore, MD). Joe first appears by name in Gabriel Duvall's Personal Property Tax records of 1833. A newspaper notice placed by Gabriel Duvall indicates that Joe self-emancipated on July 25, 1837. In 1838, an enslaved man named Joe was listed in Gabriel's unrecorded 1838 will, stating that Joe would be bequeathed to Gabriel's grandson Marcus Duval upon Gabriel's death. This indicates that Joe had been captured and re-enslaved after his self-emancipation attempt. The next mention of Joe comes in 1845, when Gabriel Duvall's executor paid $10.10 to J. B. Brookes & Bro. for "searching for runaway Joe." No self-emancipation notice was found for Joe that time, and it is unknown exactly when he decided to self-emancipate for the second time. Joe was not identified by Gabriel Duvall in his 1840 will, nor was he listed on Gabriel's 1844 estate inventory after Gabriel's death. Joe could have fled any time between July 1838 and April 1844. The bill to J. B. Brookes & Bro., although undated, was paid off in 1845. The language of the account entry "searching for runaway Joe," and the fact that the sum paid does not seem to include adequate reward money, leads us to believe that Joe was not found and returned.

NOTE: SID research for Joe (GD32) stated "Later on in the historic record, we identified another enslaved individual named Joe (GD1149) that seems to match the earlier records and trajectory of Joe (GD32). Description:	In 1833, Joe was identified by name on the Prince George's County, Maryland Personal Property Tax record of Gabriel Duvall. Joe's appraised monetary "value" of $350.00 placed him as an adult male, likely between the age of 14 and 45. Most likely Joe was closer to the older end of that age range (approximately 36).

Self-Emancipation Free ☐ 7/25/1837 ☐ Marietta

Description: In 1837, Joe self-emancipated:

"One Hundred and Fifty Dollars Reward. Ranaway on Tuesday last, from my farm in Prince George's county, a negro [sic] slave named JOE, aged 39 years, almost five feet ten inches high. His complexion is dark, not black, stammers in conversation, and stoops a little. He had on and took with him a great coat of drab colored course cloth, two short coats of country cloth, kersey of a light color, pantaloons of the same, and some other clothing. He has a brother named Tom, who belonged to Mr. Ritchie, of Frederick, since deceased; another brother named Phil, who belonged to Mr. Kennedy, of Baltimore. Tom, it has been said, now resides in Baltimore; he is a free man. Joe will probably go to Frederick or Baltimore. The above reward will be promptly paid to any person who will take him up and deliver him to me, or confine him in jail so that I get him again. G. DUVALL."

Notes: The newspaper notice was placed on July 31, 1837; therefore, "Tuesday last" means Joe self-emancipated on July 25, 1837.

Re-enslaved Enslaved ☒ 7/26/1837 ☒ 6/23/1838 Marietta

Description: Gabriel Duvall bequeathed Joe to his grandson, Marcus Duval, in his unrecorded 1838 will. This inclusion of Joe in Gabriel Duvall's 1838 will indicates that Joe had been found and returned to Marietta following his 1837 self-emancipation. There is no specific documented re-enslavement date, but it would have been between 7/26/1837 and 6/23/1838 (when Gabriel's 1838 will was executed).

Joe was not identified by Gabriel Duvall in his 1840 will, nor was he listed on Gabriel's 1844 estate inventory after Gabriel's death. This permits us to surmise that Joe fled again between July of 1838 and 1844. The bill to J. B. Brookes & Bro. although undated, was paid off in 1845. The language of the account entry "searching for runaway Joe," and the fact that the sum paid does not seem to include adequate reward money, leads us to believe that Joe was not found and returned.

Biographical Narrative: John Buchanan was born enslaved on February 14, 1817 to his enslaved mother Fanny Buchanan and his father Charles Buchanan (a person of color who was free, if not his whole life, then likely earlier than 1827). Much of what we know about John comes from information related to his mother Fanny, who was enslaved originally by Benjamin Duvall, Jr., and later by Sarah Duvall beginning in 1801. At some point before 1827, Fanny married Charles Buchanan and the couple had four children: John, Elizabeth, Charles, Nicholas. As Fanny was enslaved, the four children of the couple were born into slavery with Sarah Duvall as their enslaver. It is possible that Fanny and her children may have resided with Charles during the period from 1813-26. On October 5, 1827, Sarah Duvall manumitted Fanny and her four children for one dollar. The next record of the family is in the 1830 census in which Charles Buchanan appears as the head of a family residing in the District of Columbia. Only Charles is mentioned by name, but the other individuals match the gender and ages of Fanny, John, Elizabeth, and Charles. It's unclear what happened to Nicholas. On September 10, 1830, Charles Buchanan wrote a will naming Frances [Fanny], John, Elizabeth, and Charles as his heirs. Charles died very shortly after around September 18, 1830. There are no other known, available records pertaining to John Buchanan following 1830. Of note, there were no listings for Buckanans (or any derivative spelling thereof) in the "District of Columbia Registry of Free Negroes" [sic].

Biographical Narrative: John was born around 1817, although records do not indicate where or whether he was born enslaved. We know he was enslaved by the age of 13, as John is documented in the April 16, 1831 estate inventory of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. taken after Edmund's death. As part of her dower's thirds, Edmund's wife Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval selected three enslaved individuals and became their new enslaver. John and the remaining enslaved individuals not selected by Augusta were inherited by Edmund and Augusta's four children equally. Therefore, Marcus Duval, Edmund B. Duval, Jr., Mary Frances Duval, and Gabriella Augusta Duval became John's new enslavers in 1831. After the death of their mother Augusta in 1832, their grandfather Gabriel Duval acted as the orphaned children's guardian and managed the financial affairs of their estate, and the lives of those they enslaved, until his grandchildren reached their majority. Gabriel hired out his grandchildren's enslaved individuals, including John, and used their labor at Marietta. He compensated the heirs' estate for their use. From 1831-32, it's believed that John performed field work at Marietta "to support the deceased's family." Per Gabriel's account book, we know that John was hired out by Gabriel at Marietta for the years 1833-1842. He may have continued to be hired by Gabriel, but the account book ends after the year 1842. In 1844-45, Personal Property tax records for the heirs of Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s estate show an enslaved individual matching John's age, although John is not specifically named. There are no known, available records pertaining to John after the year 1845.

Additional Information

Edmund B. Duval, Sr. died intestate in 1831. The administration of Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s estate fell to his father, Gabriel Duvall. By law, Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s widow, Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, inherited her chosen one-third (her dower) of his enslaved persons. Augusta C. McCausland Duval died in October of 1832. At that time, the enslaved of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. and Augusta C. McCausland Duval were bequeathed to their four living children: Marcus Du Val, Edmund B. Duval, Jr., Mary Frances Duval, Gabriella Augusta Duval. Gabriel Duvall, grandfather of the said four heirs, was the manager and guardian of all their inherited enslaved persons until the four heirs reached their majorities. Documentation of Gabriel Duvall's personal accounts for the grandchildren survived and provided a fuller account of this group of enslaved individuals. Although there is evidence of enslaved ownership by Edmund B. Duval, Sr. that dated back to 1818, our only current understanding of the specifically named enslaved individuals of his estate is from 1831. We have no information at this time of their origins prior to their enslavement by Edmund B. Duval, Sr.

Currently, we have found no record of the enslaved of Marietta having come from the family of Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval. Augusta's father, Marcus McCausland, was recorded on the 1820 U.S. Federal Census as having five enslaved individuals in Baltimore County, Maryland. Marcus McCausland died in 1828 leaving everything to his wife and executrix, Mary Ann McCausland. The inventory of Marcus McCausland's estate recorded no enslaved. Mary Ann McCausland was recorded with no enslaved on the 1830 U.S. Federal Census. We have currently found no record of the whereabouts of those five enslaved individuals that were enumerated in 1820. No deed of purchase or deed of gift transferring ownership of an enslaved individual from the McCauslands to the Duvals was located.

Biographical Narrative: John was born around 1793 and was enslaved by William Duvall of the District of Columbia. In 1805, William Duvall mortgaged twelve-year-old John to Gabriel Duvall along with a ten-year-old enslaved boy named Moses. It is unknown whether William Duvall paid the debt owed by April 1, 1806 or if Gabriel became John's new enslaver. Gabriel is listed as a possible enslaver. John did not appear on Gabriel's 1833 Personal Property Tax list that identified all enslaved people by first name. If John had indeed been acquired by Gabriel, he was either sold, dead, or had self-emancipated prior to 1833.

Description: In 1805, William Duvall, of the District of Columbia, mortgaged to Gabriel Duvall, also of the District of Columbia, for $210.25 "Two negro [sic] boy slaves named John (aged abt 12) & Moses (aged abt 10)." The debt was to be paid by April 1, 1806 in order for the said mortgage to be void. It is not known if William Duvall paid off his debt, hence, we do not know for certain whether or not the ownership of John was ever conveyed to Gabriel Duvall.

Biographical Narrative: Henry was born on September 15, 1813, although records do not indicate where or whether he was born enslaved. Henry was also known as John Henry, Harry, and likely Henry Smith. We know he was enslaved by the age of 17, as he is documented as "John Henry" in the April 16, 1831 estate inventory of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. taken after Edmund's death. As part of her dower's thirds, Edmund's wife Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval selected three enslaved individuals and became their new enslaver. A July 1864 Baltimore Sun article named recent Civil War draftee Henry Smith as enslaved by Marcus Duval. Henry, among others from the First District in Prince George's County, were part of the draft held at Ellicott's Mills. There were 660 persons drawn, 332 of whom were enslaved. These enslaved and free men of color would have been drafted into the United States Colored Troops. SID states it is likely that Henry Smith was Henry, formerly enslaved by the heirs of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. However, if this is John Henry/Henry, he would have been 50 years old when drafted. Did the USCT draft men of this age? Further research is necessary.

Description: It's unknown where Henry was born, or if he was born enslaved. At the time of the 1831 inventory of Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s estate, Henry (listed as "John Henry") was 17 years old. Whereas others in Edmund's inventory appear to be split into family groups, Henry does not appear to be listed under a parent. On August 22, 1835, Gabriel Duvall recorded that Henry was born on September 15, 1813.

Description: Gabriel Duvall's account book for the guardianship of Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s heirs showed that he hired the working hands of the estate in the years 1831 and 1832. They "worked in the crops, as usual, to support the family of the deceased." We believe Henry worked alongside the other enslaved hands during this period.

Military Service	Unknown	<input type="checkbox"/>	7/1864	<input type="checkbox"/>		Prince George's County, MD
Description: A July 1864 Baltimore Sun article named recent Civil War draftee Henry Smith as enslaved by Marcus Duval. Henry, among others from the First District in Prince George's County, were part of the draft held at Ellicott's Mills. There were 660 persons drawn, 332 of whom were enslaved. These enslaved and free men of color would have been drafted into the United States Colored Troops. It is likely that Henry Smith was Henry, formerly enslaved by the heirs of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. We recommend that this line of enquiry be pursued further.
Notes: More research needs to be conducted to determine: 1) Whether Henry Smith was John Henry. If so, he would have been 50 years old when drafted. Were they drafting enslaved people that old? 2) Whether enslaved individuals were granted freedom upon performing military service, or whether they were still enslaved.

Additional Information

Edmund B. Duval, Sr. died intestate in 1831. The administration of Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s estate fell to his father, Gabriel Duvall. By law, Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s widow, Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, inherited her chosen one-third (her dower) of his enslaved persons. Augusta C. McCausland Duval died in October of 1832. At that time, the enslaved of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. and Augusta C. McCausland Duval were bequeathed to their four living children: Marcus Du Val, Edmund B. Duval, Jr., Mary Frances Duval, Gabriella Augusta Duval. Gabriel Duvall, grandfather of the said four heirs, was the manager and guardian of all their inherited enslaved persons until the four heirs reached their majorities. Documentation of Gabriel Duvall's personal accounts for the grandchildren survived and provided a fuller account of this group of enslaved individuals. Although there is evidence of enslaved ownership by Edmund B. Duval, Sr. that dated back to 1818, our only current understanding of the specifically named enslaved individuals of his estate is from 1831. We have no information at this time of their origins prior to their enslavement by Edmund B. Duval, Sr.

Currently, we have found no record of the enslaved of Marietta having come from the family of Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval. Augusta's father, Marcus McCausland, was recorded on the 1820 U.S. Federal Census as having five enslaved individuals in Baltimore County, Maryland. Marcus McCausland died in 1828 leaving everything to his wife and executrix, Mary Ann McCausland. The inventory of Marcus McCausland's estate recorded no enslaved. Mary Ann McCausland was recorded with no enslaved on the 1830 U.S. Federal Census. We have currently found no record of the whereabouts of those five enslaved individuals that were enumerated in 1820. No deed of purchase or deed of gift transferring ownership of an enslaved individual from the McCauslands to the Duvals was located.

Biographical Narrative: Johnny Boy was enslaved by Mareen Duvall at Middle Plantation in Anne Arundel County, MD, and appears in the 1694 appraisal of Mareen's estate after his death with a monetary "value" of £28. Mareen did not bequeath any of his enslaved individuals to his son Benjamin Duvall, Sr., so Johnny Boy and his potential descendants likely had no ties to the Old Mansion/Wigwam or Marietta. When Mareen's widow Mary Duvall remarried to Henry Ridgely, she took some of Mareen's enslaved individuals with her to Catton Plantation. Johnny Boy does not appear in the 1710 inventory of Henry Ridgely's estate, however, so it's unclear whether he went to Catton Plantation. He may have been sold, died, or self-emancipated prior to that date.

Biographical Narrative: Little is known about Joseph Duckett except that his parents were Hezekiah Duckett (formerly enslaved by Gabriel Duvall and Marcus Duval) and Rebecca Duckett. His parents had three children: Eliza (born ca. 1867), Edward (born ca. 1873), and Joseph (born ca. 1876). In the 1880 U.S. Federal Census, the family was living at 312 Willow Tree Alley in Washington, D.C. and Joseph's parents worked as a laborer and a laundress. It seems that Joseph's father died at the approximate age of 45 years old on September 2, 1891.

Notes: Slight difference in ages -- per the death record Hezekiah would have been born in 1846, but Hezekiah wasn't accounted for in Gabriel's 1844 estate. Per the 1880 census, Hezekiah would have been born in 1840. There is a 6 year gap in the ages given.

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Brown (born August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912) come through the ca. 1908 marriage of Calphus and Margaret's son William A. Brown to a woman named Louise (Lizie).

Biographical Narrative: As his mother Henny Black was enslaved by Delilah Duvall, Joseph Black was born into enslavement circa 1833, likely at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove). Joseph's siblings Charles Black (born ca. 1830) and Lucy Black (born ca. 1835) were also born enslaved by Delilah. On May 13, 1836, Delilah Duvall wrote a deed of manumission, which would free Henny, Henny's mother Jane Black, and Henny's three children upon the death of Delilah. The deed also included freedom for any future children of Henny. Delilah Duvall died in 1839, but individuals matching the trajectory of the Black family still appear on personal property tax records through 1841. Joseph, however, does not appear. Joseph's mother Henny was likely manumitted circa 1842-43, as a sworn statement was given by a Richard Smith to the Prince George's County Court on September 17, 1843, attesting that Jane Black and Henny Black were manumitted by Delilah Duvall's death. No mention of Henny's children, including Joseph, was made in the sworn statement. It's likely that Henny and her mother Jane moved to Washington, D.C. as census records from 1850 show a Joseph Black, born about 1833, enumerated in a household along with a Black woman named J. Black [possibly Jane] and a Black woman named Hannah [possibly Henny], born about 1813. In 1870, a Joseph Black, born about 1835, was enumerated in Washington, D.C. with a Jane Black who was born about 1800. It is possible the individual found in later census records was Joseph Black (DD10). We recommend that this line of enquiry be pursued further.

Biographical Narrative: Between the period 1783 and 1800, an enslaved individual matching Kate's life trajectory appears in the tax assessments of Benjamin Duvall. If this is Kate, she was born circa 1771. The small scale of Benjamin Duvall, Jr.'s slaveholdings, as well as the age and gender markers of those enslaved recorded in Benjamin Duvall, Jr.'s tax records, has led SID to conclude that the majority of those enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr. were of a single-family unit that consisted of at least four children with their mother and father: Airey (BDjr18), her husband (likely Robin - BDjr19), and their 4 children, likely the following: Kate (BDjr26), [Enslaved Female - Name Unknown] (BDjr3), [Enslaved Female - Name Unknown] (BDjr4), Ruth (DD1). We know Kate had at least three children by 1794, and she is first mentioned by name in Benjamin Duvall's will of that year, which states "Kate and her three children" (BDjr27, BDjr28, BDjr29, names all unknown) and any future children (SD23, name unknown; likely SD7, Fanny Buchanan) would be inherited by his daughter Sarah Duvall. Kate continued to be enslaved by Benjamin until his death in 1801, at which time her new enslaver became Sarah Duvall. Sarah continued living at the Old Mansion / Wigwam, where she was taxed for an enslaved individual matching Kate's description for the years 1802-31. There are no known, available records pertaining to Kate after the year 1831.

Biographical Narrative: Kate was enslaved by Mareen Duvall at Middle Plantation in Anne Arundel County, MD, and appears in the 1694 appraisal of Mareen's estate after his death with a monetary "value" of £10. She was likely a young girl, and may have been the offspring of one of Mareen Duvall's enslaved females. Mareen did not bequeath any of his enslaved individuals to his son Benjamin Duvall, Sr., so Kate and her potential descendants likely had no ties to the Old Mansion/Wigwam or Marietta. When Mareen's widow Mary Duvall remarried to Henry Ridgely, she took some of Mareen's enslaved individuals with her to Catton Plantation. Kate does not appear in the 1710 inventory of Henry Ridgely's estate, however, so it's unclear whether she went to Catton Plantation. She may have been sold, died, or self-emancipated prior to that date.

Biographical Narrative: Little is currently known about Kitty other than that she was enslaved by Gabriel Duvall at Marietta. She was either born at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) or was purchased later by Gabriel Duvall. Gabriel's tax records since 1802 do reflect unnamed individuals who might match Kitty's life trajectory at the Old Mansion/Wigwam and Marietta. Kitty was first identified by name in Gabriel's 1833 Personal Property Tax record, where she was listed as an adult female, likely between the ages of 14-36. Kitty was not mentioned in Gabriel's 1838 will, so she may have died, been sold, or self-emancipated prior to 1838.

Biographical Narrative: Thomas Butler, his wife Sarah Butler, and their children Lydia, Jane, and Sally were enslaved by John Dells (or Dales) some time prior to 1799. At various times from 1799-1805, the Butler family lived with Dells in Maryland, Virginia, and the Georgetown neighborhood in Washington, D.C. Dells hired out Thomas and Sarah to Thomas Gossum in Virginia and to Christian Getzendanner in Georgetown. Around 1805 or earlier, Dells sold Thomas and Sarah's children Lydia and Jane away from the family. No record of their sale or their new enslaver has been located. According to witness Matthew Kennedy, in the spring of 1805, Dells and Duvall met in Gabriel's Washington City office and the sale of Thomas, Sarah, and Sally to Duvall was agreed upon. Then Duvall and Dells met at William Duvall's in Georgetown where the sale was finalized, Thomas and Sarah having agreed to the transfer. This would have occurred on May 29 or 30, 1805. Duvall sent Thomas, Sarah, and Sally to Prince George's County to work. This was prior to the building of Marietta, so the Butlers likely lived and labored at the Old Mansion at first. Prior to 1828, Thomas and Sarah had additional children named Matilda, Airy, and Reason. Between 1815-28, they also had two grandchildren named Liddy and Eliza, who were likely born at Marietta. It is not clear which of their children was the parent of Liddy and Eliza.

Duvall, Gabriel, 12/6/1752 to 4/2/1844 (GD)	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	1805 (after)	On 5/29/1805, Gabriel Duvall purchased Thomas, Sarah, and Sally. He sent them to live and work at the Old Mansion / Wigwam or on Marietta land before he began construction on Marietta's house. Liddy was born into slavery sometime after Duval's purchase of her grandfather, grandmother, and sister. The multigenerational Butler family, headed by Thomas and Sarah, were foundational within Marietta's enslaved community, being some of the earliest people held there.

Description:	Testimony given in the Butlers' freedom petition case states that Thomas and Sarah had one child (Sally) when they were purchased by Gabriel Duvall on 5/29/1805. Sally was likely born between 1800-1805. We don't know that Sally was Eliza and Liddy's mother, but if she was, she wouldn't have been of childbearing age until 1815 at the earliest. Therefore, Eliza and Liddy's birth dates are estimated at 1815-28. They would have likely been born enslaved at Marietta, which was completed by 1816.

Marietta Associated: ☒ Checking the "Marietta Associated" box means this individual was enslaved at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) OR at Marietta.

Name: Lot [Unknown] (GD1163) Gender: Male Religion:

Date of Birth: ☒ ca? 1825-33 Place of Birth: likely Marietta, Prince George's County, MD

Date of Death: ☒ 1850-60? Place of Death:

Race: Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Lot was born around 1825-33, likely at Marietta. Lot was first identified by name as an infant male, likely between the age of 0-8, in the 1833 Personal Property Tax record of Gabriel Duvall. In his 1838 and 1840 wills, Gabriel bequeathed Lot to his grandson Marcus Duval, and Marcus became Lot's enslaver in 1844 after Gabriel's death. In Marcus Duval's enslaved holdings in 1850 was a man matching Lot's age, gender, and monetary "value," so it appears Lot had moved from Marietta to Wigwam once Marcus became his enslaver. In 1860, no individual matching Lot's age, gender, and monetary "value" could be identified in the enslaved holdings for Marcus Duval. It is possible that Lot had been hired out, but we feel strongly that Lot had perished by 1860. The $1.00 appraisal "value" of Lot in Gabriel Duvall's 1844 inventory points to a potential illness or serious infirmity.

Louise Brown [FREE BLACK PERSON] (LBFree)

Marietta Associated: ☐ Leaving the "Marietta Associated" box unchecked means this individual was enslaved at a site other than the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) or Marietta OR was free person of color.

Name: Louise Brown [FREE BLACK PERSON] (LBFree) Gender: Female Religion:

Date of Birth: ☒ 1875-80 Place of Birth: Maryland

Date of Death: ☐ Place of Death:

Race: Black Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Louise (Lizie) Brown was born between 1875-80 in Maryland. She married William A. Brown ca. 1908, with whom she had two children: Mabel E. Brown (born ca. August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912). The couple lived with William A. Brown's mother Margaret Ann Duckett Brown in Washington, D.C., where Louise worked as a laundress from her home. The 1910 census states Louise could not read or write, but the 1920 census indicates she could. There is no further information about Louise after the 1920 census, but further research might provide more details about her life.

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son

Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Brown (born August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912) come through the ca. 1908 marriage of Calphus and Margaret's son William A. Brown to a woman named Louise (Lizie).

Biographical Narrative: As her mother Henny Black was enslaved by Delilah Duvall, Lucy Black was born into enslavement circa September 1835, likely at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove). Lucy's siblings Charles Black (born ca. 1830) and Joseph Black (born ca. 1833) were also born enslaved by Delilah. On May 13, 1836, Delilah Duvall wrote a deed of manumission, which would free Henny, Henny's mother Jane Black, and Henny's three children upon the death of Delilah. The deed also included freedom for any future children of Henny. Delilah Duvall died in 1839, but individuals matching the trajectory of the Black family still appear on personal property tax records through 1841. Lucy, however, does not appear. Lucy's mother Henny was likely manumitted circa 1842-43, as a sworn statement was given by a Richard Smith to the Prince George's County Court on September 17, 1843, attesting that Jane Black and Henny Black were manumitted by Delilah Duvall's death. No mention of Henny's children, including Lucy, was made in the sworn statement. It's likely that Henny and her mother Jane moved to Washington, D.C. as census records from 1850 show a "Hannah" Black living with a woman named "J. Black" and a child named Joseph Black (likely Lucy's brother). However, Lucy does not appear in this census record. The 1869 Washington, D.C. City Directory listed a person of color named Lucy Black as a servant, residing at 571 8th Street East. Currently, there is insufficient, corroborating information to confirm that the following individual was the Lucy Black formerly enslaved by Delilah Duvall. We recommend that this line of enquiry be pursued further.

Description: On May 13, 1836, Delilah Duvall wrote a Deed of Manumission for Lucy's mother Henny Black and her grandmother Jane Black. The manumission also named and freed Henny's children: Charles Black, aged 6; Joseph Black, aged 3; and Lucy Black, aged 9 months. It also included freedom for any of the named females' future children. The manumission was to be executed following Delilah's death.

Biographical Narrative: Enslaved by Gabriel Duvall, Luke Tyler was likely born at Marietta between 1825-33. Luke was first identified by name as an infant male, likely between the age of 0-8, in the 1833 Personal Property Tax record of Gabriel Duvall. Luke was first bequeathed to Edmund Bryce Duval, Jr. in Gabriel's unrecorded 1838 will, but was then bequeathed to Gabriella Augusta Duval in the 1840 will. After Gabriel's death in 1844, no individual matching Luke's age, gender, and value could be identified in the enslaved holdings for Gabriella Augusta Duval or Edmund B. Duval, Jr. Gabriella Augusta Duval was reported still residing at Marietta with her brother Edmund B. Duval, Jr. in the 1850 U.S. Federal Census for Prince George's County, Maryland. In July 12, 1864, however, a newspaper article about Luke being drafted into the United States Colored Troops (USCT) indicates he was still enslaved and his enslaver was Edmund. Currently, no postbellum records have been discovered for Luke. Further research would be warranted.

Description:	From Gabriel Duvall's 1840 will, we would assume that legally, Luke Tyler, had been bequeathed to Gabriella Augusta Duval, and hence, he would have transitioned into her slave holdings. But, in 1864, a document identified Edmund B. Duval, Jr. as the enslaver of Luke Tyler. Following the death of Gabriel Duvall, did his grandchildren re-evaluate their enslaved bequeathments and re-assign said enslaved individuals according to their own wishes? Did they perhaps change the intended enslaver at the request of the enslaved? There are many potential scenarios that could have altered the trajectory of an enslaved person's life that would never have been recorded on paper. Due to these unrecorded events, we always err on the side of caution when interpreting surviving documents to determine enslaved persons identities, families, and lifeways.

Biographical Narrative: Thomas Butler, his wife Sarah Butler, and their children Lydia, Jane, and Sally were enslaved by John Dells (or Dales) some time prior to 1799. At various times from 1799-1805, the Butler family lived with Dells in Maryland, Virginia, and the Georgetown neighborhood in Washington, D.C. Dells hired out Thomas and Sarah to Thomas Gossum in Virginia and to Christian Getzendanner in Georgetown. Around 1805 or earlier, Dells sold Thomas and Sarah's children Lydia and Jane away from the family. No record of their sale or their new enslaver has been found.

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFfree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Per the tax records of Benjamin Duvall, Jr., this male child (name unknown) of Kate was born circa 1793, likely at the Old Mansion / Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove). Since his mother Kate was enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr., this male child would have been born enslaved. We know Kate had at least three children by 1794, and she is first mentioned by name in Benjamin Duvall's will of that year, which states "Kate and her three children" (BDjr27, BDjr28, BDjr29, names all unknown) and any future children (SD23, name unknown; likely SD7, Fanny Buchanan) were bequeathed to his daughter Sarah Duvall. Kate's male child matches the description of an individual (name unknown) that continued to be enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr. at the Old Mansion until 1800. After Benjamin's death in 1801, this male child's new enslaver was Sarah Duvall. Sarah continued living at the Old Mansion / Wigwam, where she was taxed for an enslaved individual matching this male child's description for the years 1802-08. There are no known, available records pertaining to this male child of Kate after the year 1808. It is unknown at this time if this enslaved individual died, self-emancipated, or was sold by Sarah Duvall.

[Male Child of Kate] [Name Unknown] (BDjr28)

Marietta Associated: ☒ Checking the "Marietta Associated" box means this individual was enslaved at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) OR at Marietta.

Name: [Male Child of Kate] [Name Unknown] (BDjr28) Gender: Male Religion:

Date of Birth: ☒ ca? 1793 Place of Birth: likely the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove), Prince George's County, MD

Date of Death: ☐ ? Place of Death:

Race: Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Per the tax records of Benjamin Duvall, Jr., this male child (name unknown) of Kate was born circa 1793, likely at the Old Mansion / Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove). Since his mother Kate was enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr., this male child would have been born enslaved. We know Kate had at least three children by 1794, and she is first mentioned by name in Benjamin Duvall's will of that year, which states "Kate and her three children" (BDjr27, BDjr28, BDjr29, names all unknown) and any future children (SD23, name unknown; likely SD7, Fanny Buchanan) were bequeathed to his daughter Sarah Duvall. Kate's male child matches the description of an individual (name unknown) that continued to be enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr. at the Old Mansion until 1800. After Benjamin's death in 1801, this male child's new enslaver was Sarah Duvall. Sarah continued living at the Old Mansion / Wigwam, where she was taxed for an enslaved individual matching this male child's description for the years 1802-08. There are no known, available records pertaining to this male child of Kate after the year 1808. It is unknown at this time if this enslaved individual died, self-emancipated, or was sold by Sarah Duvall.

Name: Margaret Ann Duckett Brown (GD226) Gender: Female Religion:

Date of Birth: ☒ 1843-44 Place of Birth: Marietta, Prince George's County, MD

Date of Death: ☐ after 1920 Place of Death:

Race: Black Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Margaret was the youngest child of Amelia and Jacob Duckett, and all three individuals (and other family members) were enslaved by Gabriel Duvall. Margaret doesn't appear in Gabriel's 1838 or 1840 wills, but she does appear in the 1844 estate inventory after Gabriel's death. She is assessed together with her mother, so she was likely born in 1843-44. There is no specific bequest relating to Margaret by name since she doesn't appear in either will; however, the 1840 will states that any future children of Amelia were also to be enslaved by Marcus Duval. Margaret was recorded among those believed to be the other children of Amelia and Jacob: Elizabeth, Martha, Benjamin, Eley, Isaiah, Elias, Jane, Hezekiah. After Gabriel's death, Margaret's new enslaver was likely Marcus Duval. Marcus reached his majority in December of 1845 and took control of the estate he received from his father Edmund B. Duval, Sr., his mother Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, and his grandfather Gabriel Duvall. This included the northern half of the larger Marietta plantation that became known as Wigwam. Margaret likely lived and labored at Wigwam, although there are no records indicating this. In Washington, D.C. on September 23, 1867, Margaret married Calphus Brown (who was previously enslaved by Gabriel Duvall and Edmund B. Duval, Jr.). The couple had two children: William Brown (born ca. 1868) and Elias Brown (born circa 1870). Calphus died prior to 1880 and, as he had served in the United States Colored Troops (USCT) during the Civil War, Margaret applied for her widow's pension in 1882. From 1880-1920, the widowed Margaret and her family were enumerated in the U.S. Federal Censuses as living in Washington, D.C., where Margaret worked as a servant and later a laundress. Census records indicate that she was unable to read or write. She last appears in the 1920 census as living with her son William Brown and his family and was not performing any labor by this time. Her grandchildren by William and his wife Louise (Lizie) were named Mabel E. Brown (born ca. 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912).

NOTE: In the various censuses, Margaret is listed as being born in either 1848 or 1850, but this can't be the case if she was assessed in the 1844 estate inventory for Gabriel Duvall. Also, census records for William Brown for 1880, 1900, 1910, and 1920 list a variety of birth years and birth locations which cause large discrepancies. Needs further research.

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Brown (born August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912) come through the ca. 1908 marriage of Calphus and Margaret's son William A. Brown to a woman named Louise (Lizie).

Biographical Narrative: Maria was born between 1797-1819, although there is no evidence of whether she was born on Duvall property or was purchased later by Gabriel Duvall. She was first identified by name as an adult female between 14 and 36 years of age in Gabriel's 1833 Personal Property Tax record; however, an individual with the potential to match Maria's age, gender, and life's trajectory appears in tax records from 1802-1832. Maria gave birth to a daughter named Araminta (aka "Minta" or "Minty") around 1825-33. Their relationship is confirmed in Gabriel's 1838 will bequeathing "Minta, daughter of Maria" to Gabriel's granddaughter Mary Frances Duval. Maria also likely had another daughter named Anne Celestia, born circa 1831-33. Both girls would have been born enslaved. An 1836 letter written by Gabriel Duvall states that Maria was his cook, and she had recently died. There appears to have been a severe illness that spread across Marietta that year, as Duvall notes in his letter that other enslaved individuals were also seriously ill.

Death Enslaved ☐ 1836 ☐ Marietta

Description: In a letter dated September 12, 1836 from Gabriel Duvall to Grafton Duvall, Maria was identified by first name, by occupation and by the fact that she was recently deceased: "We enjoy good health with the exception of some of my slaves. I have lost Maria, my cook, which is a serious loss, as I have not one fit to be employed in that capacity, and others of my people are seriously indisposed. G. Duvall, Marietta." While we do not know Maria's cause of death, it appears as if a severe illness had spread across Marietta in 1836. Gabriel Duvall also noted that other individuals in his enslaved holdings were seriously ill at that time.

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Maria was likely the child of Everlina, both of whom were enslaved by Gabriel Duvall and Edmund B. Duval, Jr. Maria doesn't appear in Gabriel's 1838 or 1840 wills, but she does appear in the 1844 estate inventory after Gabriel's death. She is assessed separately from Everlina, so she was likely born around 1840. Everlina had a son named Calphus Brown (born ca. 1843-44), and was likely the mother of Walter Brown (born ca. 1850-56), so they were likely Maria's siblings. It is possible that Maria's last name was Brown. There is no specific bequest relating to Maria by name since she doesn't appear in either of Gabriel's wills; however, the 1840 will states that any future children of Everlina were also to be enslaved by Edmund B. Duval, Jr. Therefore, Edmund became Maria's new enslaver after Gabriel's 1844 death. An individual matching Maria's age, gender, and monetary "value" lived and labored at Marietta from 1844-60. There are no known, available records pertaining to Maria by name after the year 1844.

Notes

In Gabriel's 1840 will, he left Everlina (likely the mother of Maria) and her future children to his grandson, Edmund B. Duval, Jr. Therefore, Edmund would have become Maria's new enslaver after Gabriel's death in 1844.

Duvall, Gabriel, 12/6/1752 to 4/2/1844 (GD)

☒ 1844 (possibly 1840)

While Maria was not included in Gabriel Duvall's 1840 will, interpretation of the 1844 inventory of Gabriel's estate (where she was named for the first time) indicates that she was likely born shortly after the writing of the will and was likely the child of Everlina, who was enslaved by Gabriel. Therefore, Maria would have been born into enslavement at Marietta.

Description: Everlina (and any of her future children) was named and bequeathed to Gabriel Duvall's grandson, Edmund B. Duval, Jr., in Gabriel's 1840 will. Maria, likely the daughter of Everlina, would legally also be held in bondage by Edmund B. Duval, Jr. after Gabriel's death in 1844.

Report: Enslaved IndividualMaria [Unknown] (GD223)

Assessed	Enslaved	<input type="checkbox"/>	4/9/1844	<input type="checkbox"/>	Marietta
Description:	Maria was assessed in the 1844 inventory of Gabriel Duvall's estate and assigned a monetary "value" of $75.00. Based on the order of names and organization of individuals according to their age and assessed values on Gabriel Duvall's 1844 probate inventory, it is likely that Maria was a child of Everlina. Maria's assessed monetary "value" of $75.00 indicated that she was old enough to have been assessed independently from her mother but still young enough to have been appraised at a relatively low monetary "value."

Description:	After 1844, an individual matching Maria's age, gender, and assigned monetary "value" could be identified in the enslaved holdings for Edmund B. Duval, Jr.

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Brown (born August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912) come through the ca. 1908 marriage of Calphus and Margaret's son William A. Brown to a woman named Louise (Lizie).

Biographical Narrative: Mark was enslaved by Gabriel Duvall and was likely born into enslavement at Marietta between the years 1825-33. Mark was first identified by name as an infant male, likely between the age of 0-8, in the 1833 Personal Property Tax record of Gabriel Duvall. In his 1838 will, Gabriel bequeathed Mark to his granddaughter Gabriella Augusta Duvall, but changed his mind in his 1840 will, instead bequeathing Mark to his grandson Edmund B. Duval, Jr. Edmund became Mark's enslaver in 1844 after Gabriel's death. In 1845, Gabriel's estate paid an "A. Hunter & others" for the capture of Mark, meaning he likely self-emancipated soon after Gabriel's death. In the U.S. Federal Census Slave Schedules for 1850 and 1860, an individual matching Mark's age, gender, and value was identified in Edmund's enslaved holdings. Therefore, Mark was likely captured and re-enslaved by Edmund at Marietta after his self-emancipation. There are no known, available records pertaining to Mark by name after the year 1845.

Biographical Narrative: Martha was the child of Amelia and Jacob Duckett, and all three individuals (and other family members) were enslaved by Gabriel Duvall. Although Martha was never officially referred to as Martha "Duckett", it's believed she potentially shared the same last name as her family. She was first recorded as enslaved by Gabriel Duvall in 1833 and assigned a monetary "value" of $60, likely meaning she was a young child. She was born about 1829-32 at Marietta and was later recorded among those believed to be the other children of Amelia and Jacob: Elizabeth, Benjamin, Isaiah, Elias, Jane, Hezekiah, Eley, Margaret Ann. In his 1838 and 1840 wills, Gabriel bequeathed Martha to his granddaughter Gabriella Augusta Duval. Gabriella became Martha's new enslaver in 1844 after Gabriel's death. Gabriella's guardian George Washington Duvall would have handled Gabriella's financial dealings and her enslaved individuals as Gabriella was still a minor. Records show that Martha was hired out from 1846 through 1848 and that she was a house servant in 1849. Gabriella Augusta Duval was reported still residing at Marietta with her brother Edmund B. Duval, Jr. in the 1850 U.S Federal Census for Prince George's County. It is currently unknown if Martha remained at Marietta with Gabriella. There are no known, available records pertaining to Martha Duckett after the year 1848.

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Brown (born August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912) come through the ca. 1908 marriage of Calphus and Margaret's son William A. Brown to a woman named Louise (Lizie).

Biographical Narrative: Thomas Butler, his wife Sarah Butler, and their children Lydia, Jane, and Sally were enslaved by John Dells (or Dales) some time prior to 1799. At various times from 1799-1805, the Butler family lived with Dells in Maryland, Virginia, and the Georgetown neighborhood in Washington, D.C. Dells hired out Thomas and Sarah to Thomas Gossum in Virginia and to Christian Getzendanner in Georgetown. Around 1805 or earlier, Dells sold Thomas and Sarah's children Lydia and Jane away from the family. No record of their sale or their new enslaver has been located. According to witness Matthew Kennedy, in the spring of 1805, Dells and Duvall met in Gabriel's Washington City office and the sale of Thomas, Sarah, and Sally to Duvall was agreed upon. Then Duvall and Dells met at William Duvall's in Georgetown where the sale was finalized, Thomas and Sarah having agreed to the transfer. This would have occurred on May 29 or 30, 1805. Duvall sent Thomas, Sarah, and Sally to Prince George's County to work. This was prior to the building of Marietta, so the Butlers likely lived and labored at the Old Mansion at first. Prior to 1828, Thomas and Sarah had additional children named Matilda, Airy, and Reason. They also had two grandchildren named Liddy and Eliza. It is not clear which of their children was the parent of Liddy and Eliza.

Fearful that Duvall was planning to sell them, in 1828 all eight members of the Butler family petitioned the D.C. circuit court for their freedom. One of their attorneys was Francis Scott Key. The case centered around whether John Dells had imported the Butlers from Virginia or D.C. in 1805 with the intent to sell them, which would be a violation of the 1796 Maryland Act. Gabriel Duvall stated he did not intend to sell the Butlers and that the case should be tried in a Maryland court, perhaps believing he could obtain a more favorable verdict in his home state. The court declined to change the venue, and decided, in fact, that John Dells did violate the non-importation clause. The Butlers were granted their freedom in 1831. More research needs to be performed in the hopes of identifying the location of Matilda Butler after the year 1831.

Marietta Associated: ☒ Checking the "Marietta Associated" box means this individual was enslaved at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) OR at Marietta.

Name: Matthew Turner (GD1156)

Gender: Male

Religion:

Date of Birth: ☒ 1819-25

Place of Birth: Likely at Marietta, Prince George's County, MD

Date of Death: ☐ ?

Place of Death:

Race: Black

Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics: Height: 5' 6" - 5' 8". Weight: 160-180 pounds.

Biographical Narrative: Matthew was enslaved by Gabriel Duvall and was likely born into enslavement at Marietta between the years 1819-25. Matthew was first identified by name as a male, likely between the age of 8-14, in the 1833 Personal Property Tax record of Gabriel Duvall. In his 1838 will, Gabriel bequeathed Matthew to his granddaughter Gabriella Augusta Duvall, but changed his mind in his 1840 will, instead bequeathing Matthew to his grandson Marcus Duval. Marcus became Matthew's enslaver in 1844 after Gabriel's death, bringing Matthew to Wigwam where Matthew lived and labored as a shoemaker and carpenter. On April 1, 1855, Matthew self-emancipated and was still free by June 23, 1855. No individual matching Matthew's description appeared in Marcus's enslaved holdings in 1860, so it's likely Matthew was not found after his 1855 self-emancipation. An individual named Matthew Turner with a similar description was enumerated in the 1870 U.S. Federal Census in Anne Arundel County, Maryland. Currently, there is insufficient corroborating evidence to support that this individual was the same Matthew as the man enslaved by Gabriel and Marcus. Further research is necessary. Matthew Turner may have changed his name after self-emancipating. Self-emancipators sometimes changed their names after seeking freedom in order to evade capture.

Enslaver Name	ca?	Enslavement Date	Notes
Duvall, Gabriel, 12/6/1752 to 4/2/1844 (GD)	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	1833 (possibly 1819)	Matthew was likely born at Marietta, thus he would have been enslaved by Gabriel since birth. He first appears by name in Gabriel's 1833 tax records; however, since 1819, Gabriel Duvall's Personal Property Tax records reflect enslaved individuals (names unknown) with the potential to match Matthew's gender, age, and life's trajectory.
Duval, Marcus, 12/31/1824 to 1873 (MD)	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	1844	In his unrecorded 1838 will, Gabriel left Matthew to his granddaughter, Gabriella Augusta Duval. In 1840, Gabriel changed his mind and left Matthew to his grandson Marcus. After Gabriel's 1844 death, Matthew likely soon became enslaved by Marcus.

Description: In 1855, Marcus Duval placed a notice in the newspaper for his "servant" Matthew Turner who had self-emancipated from Wigwam. "$100 REWARD. - Ran away from my farm, near Buena Vista, P.O., Prince George's county, Md, on the first day of April, 1855, my SERVANT, MATTHEW TURNER. He is near 35 years of age, about five feet six or eight inches high, and weighs from one hundred and sixty to one hundred and eighty pounds. He is very black, and has a remarkable thick (or double) upper lip and neck; looks as if his eyes are half closed, walks slow, talks and laughs loud. He is a very good shoemaker, and a rough carpenter. I will give $100 reward to whoever will secure him in jail, so that I can get him again, no matter where taken. MARCUS DU VAL"

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Mingo was enslaved by Mareen Duvall at Middle Plantation in Anne Arundel County, MD, and appears in the 1694 appraisal of Mareen's estate after his death, with a monetary "value" of £26. Mareen did not bequeath any of his enslaved individuals to his son Benjamin Duvall, Sr., so Mingo and his potential descendants likely had no ties to the Old Mansion/Wigwam or Marietta. Rather, some of Mareen's enslaved people were inherited by his widow Mary Duvall, who then married Colonel Henry Ridgely in 1695. The couple lived at Middle Plantation for a few years before moving to Catton Plantation in Prince George's County around 1700. In 1710, Ridgely died, and the inventory of his estate included a man named Mingoe "valued" at £30. Additionally, there is a heading for "Mingoes Quarter" on the inventory, revealing Mingo was in charge of some of Ridgely's land located away from the main plantation. Living and working at these quarters, he managed 25 head of cattle and had a gun for protection. Away from his enslaver, Mingo would have had some independence, made decisions about the organization of work and the maintenance and discipline of other enslaved people there, and some responsibility for the farm's success. The presence of two linen wheels and six bowls indicates he was not alone at the quarters, and that women were likely present, perhaps family members. The inventory also lists an enslaved man named Little Mingoe, who may have been Mingo's son. Currently, there are no additional records related to Mingo after 1710.

Moses Black (DD6)

Marietta Associated: ☒ Checking the "Marietta Associated" box means this individual was enslaved at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) OR at Marietta.

Name: Moses Black (DD6) Gender: Male Religion:

Date of Birth: ☐ ca? 3/12/1796 Place of Birth: Likely at the Old Mansion / Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove), Prince George's County, MD

Date of Death: ☐ Place of Death:

Race: Black Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics: Height: 5' 5"; dark complexion; two scars on his forehead above left eye; scar on left hand between thumb and forefinger; mole on middle finger of right hand.

Biographical Narrative: As his mother Ruth was enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr. by 1794 (possibly 1783), Moses Black was born into enslavement on March 12, 1796, likely at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove). We know Ruth had at least three children by 1794, and she is first mentioned by name in Benjamin Duvall's will of that year, which states "Ruth and her three children" [BDjr21 - name unknown, BDjr22 - name unknown, BDjr23 - Jane Black] and future children [DD12 - name unknown, DD6 - Moses Black, DD13 - name unknown; DD18 - name unknown] would pass to his daughter, Delilah Duvall. Moses was enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr. from 1796-1801. Upon Benjamin's death circa January 24, 1801, Moses's new enslaver became Delilah Duvall and tax records indicate Moses lived and worked at the Old Mansion from 1802-12. Although there are no known, available records pertaining to Moses during the period from 1813-26, later records confirm Delilah Duvall's continued ownership. Moses Black may have been hired out during these years. Moses was manumitted by Delilah Duvall on June 1, 1827 in return for the sum of $300, to be paid by Moses in equal installments over three years. In the years 1850, 1860, and 1870, a Moses Black was enumerated in the U.S. Federal Census in the District of Columbia. This individual was a Black man, born about 1800 in Maryland, who worked as a whitewasher. Currently, there is insufficient, corroborating information to confirm the following individual was Moses Black (DD6). We recommend that this line of inquiry be pursued further.

Biographical Narrative: Moses was born around 1795 and was enslaved by William Duvall of the District of Columbia. In 1805, William Duvall mortgaged ten-year-old Moses to Gabriel Duvall along with a twelve-year-old enslaved boy named John. It is unknown whether William Duvall paid the debt owed by April 1, 1806 or if Gabriel became Moses's new enslaver. Gabriel is listed as a possible enslaver. Moses did not appear on Gabriel's 1833 Personal Property Tax list that identified all enslaved people by first name. If Moses had indeed been acquired by Gabriel, he was either sold, dead, or had self-emancipated prior to 1833.

Description: In 1805, William Duvall, of the District of Columbia, mortgaged to Gabriel Duvall, also of the District of Columbia, for $210.25 "Two negro [sic] boy slaves named John (aged abt 12) & Moses (aged abt 10)." The debt was to be paid by April 1, 1806 in order for the said mortgage to be void. It is not known if William Duvall paid off his debt, hence, we do not know for certain whether or not the ownership of Moses was ever conveyed to Gabriel Duvall.

Biographical Narrative: Nancy was born around 1797. It's unknown whether she was born into enslavement, but she was enslaved by Edmund Bryce Duval, Sr. at the Old Mansion / Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) prior to Edmund's death on February 5, 1831. She was a mother, giving birth to a child named James (aka Jim) in 1823-24. When James self-emancipated in 1844, his complexion was described with the derogatory term "yellow," so he may have been of mixed race. After Edmund, Sr.'s 1831 death, his wife Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval became Nancy and James's new enslaver by selecting them as part of her dower's share. However, Augusta died shortly thereafter on October 7, 1832. The inventory of Augusta's estate lists Nancy as 32 years old and assigned her a monetary "value" of $250. Augusta's 1832 will bequeathed Nancy to her daughter Gabriella Augusta, with Gabriella's estate and enslaved individuals managed by Gabriel Duvall until she came of age. Nancy probably moved to Marietta to work, since Gabriella also took up residence there. On September 10, 1833, at the age of about 36, Nancy died. The location of Nancy's burial was unrecorded and remains unknown.

Additional Information

Edmund B. Duval, Sr. died intestate in 1831. The administration of Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s estate fell to his father, Gabriel Duval. By law, Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s widow, Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, inherited her chosen one-third (her dower) of his enslaved persons. Augusta C. McCausland Duval died in October of 1832. At that time, the enslaved of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. and Augusta C. McCausland Duval were bequeathed to their four living children: Marcus Duval, Edmund B. Duval, Jr., Mary Frances Duval, Gabriella Augusta Duval. Gabriel Duval, grandfather of the said four heirs, was the manager and guardian of all their inherited enslaved persons until the four heirs reached their majorities. Documentation of Gabriel Duval's personal accounts for the grandchildren survived and provided a fuller account of this group of enslaved individuals. Although there is evidence of enslaved ownership by Edmund B. Duval, Sr. that dated back to 1818, our only current understanding of the specifically named enslaved individuals of his estate is from 1831. We have no information at this time of their origins prior to their enslavement by Edmund B. Duval, Sr.

Currently, we have found no record of the enslaved of Marietta having come from the family of Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval. Augusta's father, Marcus McCausland, was recorded on the 1820 U.S. Federal Census as having five enslaved individuals in Baltimore County, Maryland. Marcus McCausland died in 1828 leaving everything to his wife and executrix, Mary Ann McCausland. The inventory of Marcus McCausland's estate recorded no enslaved. Mary Ann McCausland was recorded with no enslaved on the 1830 U.S. Federal Census. We have currently found no record of the whereabouts of those five enslaved individuals that were enumerated in 1820. No deed of purchase or deed of gift transferring ownership of an enslaved individual from the McCauslands to the Duvals was located.

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Nicholas Buchanan was born enslaved on August 5, 1826 to his enslaved mother Fanny Buchanan and his father Charles Buchanan (a person of color who was free, if not his whole life, then likely earlier than 1827). Much of what we know about Nicholas comes from information related to his mother Fanny, who was enslaved originally by Benjamin Duvall, Jr., and later by Sarah Duvall beginning in 1801. At some point before 1827, Fanny married Charles Buchanan and the couple had four children: John, Elizabeth, Charles, Nicholas. As Fanny was enslaved, the four children of the couple were born into slavery with Sarah Duvall as their enslaver. It is possible that Fanny and her children may have resided with Charles during the period from 1813-26. On October 5, 1827, Sarah Duvall manumitted Fanny and her four children for one dollar. The next record of the family is in the 1830 census in which Charles Buchanan appears as the head of a family residing in the District of Columbia. Only Charles's father Charles is mentioned by name, but the other individuals match the gender and ages of Fanny, John, Elizabeth, and Charles (the son). It's unclear what happened to Nicholas. Nicholas doesn't appear in Charles's will written on September 10, 1830 either. There are no known, available records pertaining to Nicholas Buchanan after 1827.

Name: Patrick Doyle [FREE WHITE PERSON] (PatDFree) Gender: Male Religion:

Date of Birth: ☐ Place of Birth:

Date of Death: ☐ Place of Death:

Race: White Ethnicity: Irish

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Patrick Doyle was a white Irish servant of Reverend Jacob Henderson who fathered two children named Rachel and Barbary with a woman named Cate. Cate and her mother Easter were enslaved by Henderson and Cate's children were born between 1734-37. It is unknown if the relationship between Patrick Doyle and Cate was consensual on her part.

Doyle is mentioned in depositions taken in the year 1800 that relate to a claim for freedom based on white parentage. The depositions were given by Susanna Grey, a neighbor of Rev. Jacob Henderson's; Benjamin Duvall "Marsh," son of Mareen Duvall the Younger and grandson of Mareen Duvall the Emigrant; and Benjamin Duvall, son of Benjamin Duvall, Sr., grandson of Mareen the Emigrant, and father of Gabriel Duvall. The three deponents state they never heard any of Henderson's enslaved individuals were entitled to or claimed freedom, and they never heard of a white or mixed-race child in the family of Henderson or left at Henderson's residence. Although the historical record doesn't mention who filed the freedom suit, the case relates to Easter, Cate, Rachel, and Barbary. In his deposition, Benjamin Duvall states, "[he] understood that the father of the said Rachel and Barbary was a certain Patrick Doyle living and being a servant in the family of said Henderson." Further research might shed light on this intriguing story, including the names of the individuals suing for their freedom. Newman states "it was proved . . . That they had been sired by a white Irishman of a negro [sic] slave, so consequently all issue by law were declared to have been non-free born." This indicates Rachel and Barbary were the petitioners, but Newman doesn't list his source for the settlement of the case, if it was indeed formally settled.

Biographical Narrative: In 1831 (or earlier), Peter was enslaved in Harford County, Maryland, by William Moylan Lansdale. Lansdale was the father of Caroline Donaldson Lansdale Duval, Edmund B. Duval, Jr.'s wife. Following her father's death in 1831, Caroline and her sister Cornelia Lansdale became joint enslavers of Peter. Their guardian and the administrator of William Moylan's estate was John H. Price, who recorded in 1836 that Peter was hired out in 1835. In 1838, Price recorded that Peter had previously been hired out by Caroline and Cornelia's mother Eliza C. Lansdale. The guardianship accounts also show payments received from 1839-43 for the hiring out of Peter. Around the year 1855, Edmund B. Duval, Jr., "sold the interest of his said wife" in an enslaved man named Peter. This is believed to have been Peter, the enslaved individual that Caroline had a shared interest in with her sister Cornelia. Unfortunately, the available records did not clarify the location or enslaver of Peter following the transaction made by Edmund B. Duval, Jr. Although the court case was filed in Prince George's County, Maryland, it is also not clear that Peter ever lived or worked at Marietta.

Biographical Narrative: Peter was enslaved by Mareen Duvall at Middle Plantation in Anne Arundel County, MD, and appears in the 1694 appraisal of Mareen's estate after his death with a monetary "value" of £28. Mareen did not bequeath any of his enslaved individuals to his son Benjamin Duvall, Sr., so Peter and his potential descendants likely had no ties to the Old Mansion/Wigwam or Marietta. When Mareen's widow Mary Duvall remarried to Henry Ridgely, she took some of Mareen's enslaved individuals with her to Catton Plantation. Peter does not appear in the 1710 inventory of Henry Ridgely's estate, however, so it's unclear whether Peter went to Catton Plantation. He may have been sold, died, or self-emancipated prior to that date.

Gabriel was the enslaver of Phil's brother Joe, who had self-emancipated from Marietta on July 25, 1837. In the newspaper notice, Gabriel states that Joe had two brothers: Tom and Phil. Sometime before 1837, Phil was enslaved by a Mr. Kennedy of Baltimore, Maryland. The notice specifically states Phil "belonged to a Mr. Kennedy." The use of the past tense of "belong" could mean that Phil was a free man by 1837 or that he was now enslaved by a person other than Kennedy. "One Hundred and Fifty Dollars Reward. Ranaway on Tuesday last, from my farm in Prince George's county, a negro [sic] slave named JOE, aged 39 years, almost five feet ten inches high. His complexion is dark, not black, stammers in conversation, and stoops a little. He had on and took with him a great coat of drab colored course cloth, two short coats of country cloth, kersey of a light color, pantaloons of the same, and some other clothing. He has a brother named Tom, who belonged to Mr. Ritchie, of Frederick, since deceased; another brother named Phil, who belonged to Mr. Kennedy, of Baltimore. Tom, it has been said, now resides in Baltimore; he is a free man. Joe will probably go to Frederick or Baltimore. Biographical Narrative: Little is currently known about Priss other than that she was enslaved by Gabriel Duvall at Marietta. She was either born at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove), inherited by Gabriel Duvall from his father Benjamin Duvall, Jr., or was purchased later by Gabriel. Gabriel's tax records since 1802 do reflect unnamed individuals who might match Priss's life trajectory at the Old Mansion/Wigwam and Marietta. Priss was first identified by name in Gabriel's 1833 Personal Property Tax record, where she was listed as an adult female, likely between the ages of 14-36. In his 1838 will, Gabriel indicated his desire to bequeath Priss to his grandson Marcus Duval, but Priss was not named in Gabriel's 1840 will, nor was she assessed in the inventory of his estate in 1844. There is no record that Marcus ever became her new enslaver. Priss may have died, been sold, or self-emancipated between 1838-40.

Duvall, Gabriel, 12/6/1752 to 4/2/1844 (GD)	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	1833 (possibly 1802)	Priss first appears by name in Gabriel's 1833 tax records; however, since 1802, Gabriel Duvall's Personal Property Tax records reflect enslaved individuals (names unknown) with the potential to match Priss's gender, age, and life's trajectory. Although Gabriel bequeathed Priss to his grandson Marcus DuVal in his 1838 will, she was not named in either his 1840 will or assessed in the 1844 inventory taken after Gabriel's death. Therefore, we cannot assume that Marcus ever became her enslaver.

Biographical Narrative: Rachel was born circa 1734-37 into enslavement. Her mother Cate was possibly first enslaved by Mary Duvall Ridgely Henderson's husband Col. Henry Ridgely, as Cate's mother Easter (Rachel's grandmother) was enslaved by him. A one-year-old girl child (name not given) is listed on the estate inventory taken in 1710 after Ridgely's death. Since Cate was born circa 1711, it's possible this girl child is Cate, but this is merely a hypothesis with no other documentation to confirm the theory. Per testimony given in 1800 by Mareen Duvall's two grandsons, Benjamin Duvall and Benjamin "Marsh" Duvall, we know that Cate was enslaved by Mary Duvall Ridgely Henderson's third husband Rev. Jacob Henderson at Catton Plantation in Prince George's County by 1712. Cate's children Rachel and Barbary would most likely have been born between 1734-37 at Catton Plantation (renamed "Belair" in 1721). Benjamin "Marsh" states that Rachel and Barbary's father was a white Irish servant named Patrick Doyle, thus the children were of mixed race. In 1721 Henderson leased Belair and the Hendersons moved away, but sources do not indicate where they lived between 1721-34. By 1735 they lived in Prince George's County near the site of the present-day Holy Trinity Episcopal Church in Bowie, Maryland. There are no extant sources stating exactly where Henderson's enslaved people lived and labored. They may have been on the same property as the couple, or on one of Henderson's other tracts. More research into Henderson's landholdings during this period of his life might prove helpful.

The testimony given in 1800 relates to a freedom petition involving Easter, Cate, and their descendants, apparently based on white parentage. Although the historical record doesn't mention who filed the freedom suit, Benjamin "Marsh" Duvall stated: "That the said negro [sic] woman Cate had two children (Molatto's) [sic] one of which was born about twelve months before the deponents going to live with said Henderson [circa 1734] and the other born the second year afterwards [circa 1737] – that he never heard of negro [sic] Cates being free but had always understood that Easter the mother of Cate, as well Cate and her children Rachel and Barbary were Slaves – The deponent further saith that he had likewise understood that the father of the said Rachel and Barbary was a certain Patrick Doyle living and being a servant in the family of said Henderson. He further saith in the year 1735 he engaged to live in the family of said Henderson and that during the term afores.d he had never heard that any of said Hendersons negroes [sic] were free or intitled to there freedom nor did he ever know or hear that ever there was a white or Molatto [sic] child left by any person at said place during his residence of eighteen years at said Jacob Hendersons." Further research might shed light on this intriguing story, including the names of the individuals suing for their freedom. Duvall genealogist Harry W. Newman states "it was proved . . . That they had been sired by a white Irishman of a negro [sic] slave, so consequently all issue by law were declared to have been non-free born." This indicates Rachel and Barbary were the petitioners, but Newman doesn't list his source for the settlement of the case, if it was indeed formally settled.

There is another outstanding question which begs an answer. Benjamin "Marsh" testified, "Rachel and Barbary the grandchildren of Easter continued with their mother, Cate during the time the deponent remained in the family of Henderson." If, as he states, he lived with the Hendersons for 18 years beginning in 1735, he would have been there until 1753. However, Rachel and Barbary don't appear on Henderson's 1752 inventory. Perhaps Benjamin "Marsh" actually left after Henderson died on October 26, 1751. Between Henderson's death and the 1752 estate inventory, Rachel and Barbary could have been sold away or self-emancipated.

Easter could be Ester. Additionally, in the same inventory, is a man named Jack heading the list of enslaved men. This may indicate that the two were a couple, particularly when added to Benjamin Duvall's testimony that "he knew many of the slaves of the said Henderson, particularly two called Jack and Easter." It is possible that Jack was the father of Cate, thus Rachel's grandparent.

Biographical Narrative: Rachel was born to Serena on December 6, 1817. Both Rachel and her mother were enslaved by Edmund B. Duval, Sr., although the date of their enslavement is unknown. Although Rachel was never referred to as Rachel Jackson, we believe she potentially shared the same last name as those believed to have been her siblings. Serena's other children were Seneca, Edward, Cary, Amelia, and Randolph. The first documentation of Rachel is in an April 16, 1831 estate inventory of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. taken after his death, where Rachel is listed as an enslaved 13-year-old girl. After Edmund's death, his wife Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval selected Rachel's mother Serena (and two other individuals) as part of her dower's thirds, becoming Serena's new enslaver. Rachel and the remaining enslaved individuals not selected by Augusta were inherited by Edmund and Augusta's four children equally. Therefore, Marcus Duval, Edmund B. Duval, Jr., Mary Frances Duval, and Gabriella Augusta Duval became Rachel's new enslavers in 1831. After the death of their mother Augusta in 1832, their grandfather Gabriel Duvall acted as the orphaned children's guardian and managed the financial affairs of their estate, and the lives of those they enslaved, until his grandchildren reached their majority. Gabriel hired out his grandchildren's enslaved individuals, including Rachel, and used their labor at Marietta. He compensated the heirs' estate for their use. In 1831 and 1832, Rachel is believed to have "worked in the crops, as usual, to support the family of the deceased." But, in 1833, Gabriel tasked 15-year-old Rachel with the care of the young Gabriella at Marietta following the death of an enslaved woman named Nancy (EBDsr10), who was originally bequeathed to Gabriella from her mother. Rachel continued in this nursemaid role, attending Gabriella "constantly," through 1834 at least. From 1835-42, and perhaps longer, Gabriel hired Rachel from his grandchildren's estate to labor at Marietta. On February 24, 1840, Rachel had a child of her own named Emily. Although there are no known, available records pertaining to Rachel after the year 1842, in 1860, Gabriella Augusta Duval, then in Alexandria, Virginia, hired out a 40-year-old Black woman to Jane Dade of Alexandria. There is the potential for this having been Rachel, who was about 40 years old at that time. Gabriella may have become Rachel's new enslaver around 1833, in an unrecorded transfer of legal ownership, to replace the loss of Nancy after Nancy's death.

Additional Information

Edmund B. Duval, Sr. died intestate in 1831. The administration of Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s estate fell to his father, Gabriel Duvall. By law, Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s widow, Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, inherited her chosen one-third (her dower) of his enslaved persons. Augusta C. McCausland Duval died in October of 1832. At that time, the enslaved of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. and Augusta C. McCausland Duval were bequeathed to their four living children: Marcus Du Val, Edmund B. Duval, Jr., Mary Frances Duval, Gabriella Augusta Duval. Gabriel Duvall, grandfather of the said four heirs, was the manager and guardian of all their inherited enslaved persons until the four heirs reached their majorities. Documentation of Gabriel Duvall's personal accounts for the grandchildren survived and provided a fuller account of this group of enslaved individuals. Although there is evidence of enslaved ownership by Edmund B. Duval, Sr. that dated back to 1818, our only current understanding of the specifically named enslaved individuals of his estate is from 1831. We have no information at this time of their origins prior to their enslavement by Edmund B. Duval, Sr.

Currently, we have found no record of the enslaved of Marietta having come from the family of Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval. Augusta's father, Marcus McCausland, was recorded on the 1820 U.S. Federal Census as having five enslaved individuals in Baltimore County, Maryland. Marcus McCausland died in 1828 leaving everything to his wife and executrix, Mary Ann McCausland. The inventory of Marcus McCausland's estate recorded no enslaved. Mary Ann McCausland was recorded with no enslaved on the 1830 U.S. Federal Census. We have currently found no record of the whereabouts of those five enslaved individuals that were enumerated in 1820. No deed of purchase or deed of gift transferring ownership of an enslaved individual from the McCauslands to the Duvals was located.

Name: Randolph Jackson (MFD15)

Gender: Male

Religion:

Date of Birth: ☐ ca? 9/15/1834

Place of Birth: Marietta, Prince George's County, MD

Date of Death: ☐

Place of Death:

Race: Black

Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics: Height: 5'8"

Repeatedly described as "short and thick; of a copper color, full cheeks" with a scar across one of his first fingers.

Biographical Narrative: Randolph was born on September 15, 1834 at Marietta. He was born into enslavement as his mother Serena had been enslaved by Edmund B. Duval, Sr. until his death in 1831. Edmund's wife Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval selected Serena as part of her dower's thirds, becoming Serena's new enslaver. Upon Augusta's death in 1832, Serena and all of her future children (including Randolph) were inherited by Edmund and Augusta's daughter Mary Frances Duval. Randolph's siblings (Serena's other children) were Rachel, Seneca, Edward, Cary, and Amelia. He also had a niece named Emily who was Rachel's daughter. After the death of Augusta in 1832, Mary Frances's grandfather Gabriel Duvall acted as the orphaned child's guardian and managed the financial affairs of her estate, and the lives of those she enslaved, until Mary Frances reached her majority. Gabriel hired out his grandchildren's enslaved individuals, including Randolph's mother Serena, using her labor at Marietta and compensating Mary Frances's estate. Gabriel Duvall's account book for the years 1838-42 records the labor of Serena and notes the maintenance of her young children. It is most likely that Randolph remained with Serena during this period, being too young to perform hireable labor for Gabriel Duvall. Rather than moving to Virginia with Mary Frances Duval after Gabriel's death in 1844, Randolph stayed at Marietta with Edmund B. Duval, Jr. Edmund would have acted as Randolph's new enslaver, although no official records have been found documenting this. According to a newspaper notice, Randolph became a footman and carriage driver around 1845. This experience provided him with knowledge of the area's roads and landscape, which he would have used during his self-emancipation on June 30, 1853. We know he was re-enslaved by Edmund because Randolph self-emancipated again on August 13, 1855, and again was re-enslaved. His third attempt at self-emancipation was on August 4, 1857. No records have been located documenting Randolph after his 1857 attempt, meaning he was either captured, successfully escaped, sold off, or died.

Biographical Narrative: Thomas Butler, his wife Sarah Butler, and their children Lydia, Jane, and Sally were enslaved by John Dells (or Dales) some time prior to 1799. At various times from 1799-1805, the Butler family lived with Dells in Maryland, Virginia, and the Georgetown neighborhood in Washington, D.C. Dells hired out Thomas and Sarah to Thomas Gossum in Virginia and to Christian Getzendanner in Georgetown. Around 1805 or earlier, Dells sold Thomas and Sarah's children Lydia and Jane away from the family. No record of their sale or their new enslaver has been located. According to witness Matthew Kennedy, in the spring of 1805, Dells and Duvall met in Gabriel's Washington City office and the sale of Thomas, Sarah, and Sally to Duvall was agreed upon. Then Duvall and Dells met at William Duvall's in Georgetown where the sale was finalized, Thomas and Sarah having agreed to the transfer. This would have occurred on May 29 or 30, 1805. Duvall sent Thomas, Sarah, and Sally to Prince George's County to work. This was prior to the building of Marietta, so the Butlers likely lived and labored at the Old Mansion at first. Prior to 1828, Thomas and Sarah had additional children named Matilda, Airy, and Reason. They also had two grandchildren named Liddy and Eliza. It is not clear which of their children was the parent of Liddy and Eliza.

Fearful that Duvall was planning to sell them, in 1828 all eight members of the Butler family petitioned the D.C. circuit court for their freedom. One of their attorneys was Francis Scott Key. The case centered around whether John Dells had imported the Butlers from Virginia or D.C. in 1805 with the intent to sell them, which would be a violation of the 1796 Maryland Act. Gabriel Duvall stated he did not intend to sell the Butlers and that the case should be tried in a Maryland court, perhaps believing he could obtain a more favorable verdict in his home state. The court declined to change the venue, and decided, in fact, that John Dells did violate the non-importation clause. The Butlers were granted their freedom in 1831.

Reason appears as "Rezin" on EBDsr's inventory taken after his death in 1831. Therefore, at some point, Gabriel Duvall must have conveyed legal ownership of Reason to his son Edmund, who became Reason's new enslaver prior to 1831.

NOTE: In 1860, a 40-year-old man named "Rezin Butler" (born in Virginia) was enumerated as a free man and head of his household in Washington, D.C. In the same household was a Sarah Butler, aged 99. SID believes these people are Reason (GD310) and Sarah (GD307). However, Reason was most likely born in Maryland and Sarah couldn't have been 59 years old when she gave birth to him. SID cites enumerator errors, but unless further information is found, it is the Marietta staff's belief that the people on this census are not Reason (GD310) and Sarah (GD307).

Description: The inventory of EBDsr's estate lists "Rezin" with a monetary "value" of $400, stating he "claims freedom." An NB at the end of the inventory (likely added shortly after the inventory was taken and the Supreme Court case decided) states: "Rezin has obtained his freedom by a judgment of the Circuit Court of the District of Columbia. Deduction of 400 from the inventory will be made."
Notes: This inventory is dated both 4/16/1831 and 4/16/1832. Based upon the content of the document and the dates of the Supreme Court case, the inventory was likely taken on 4/16/1831.

Description: Additional account of EBDsr's estate filed by Gabriel Duvall which "...craves an allowance for the following payments and disbursements to wit of this sum... the amount of appraisement of Negro [sic] Rezin who obtained his freedom in the Circuit Court ... $400."
Notes: SID research concluded Reason wasn't freed at the same time as his family, but that is very unlikely to be the case. There are a few conflicting dates that make Marietta staff believe Reason was on the estate when Edmund died, but freed once the court decision came a month later. This conclusion is based on the following: The Butler case was decided in May 1831. Given that the inventory has conflicting dates stating it was authorized and sworn on 4/16/1832, but then certified on 4/16/1831, it's likely that the inventory was indeed taken in 1831 (two months after Edmund's death). It would make more sense than it being taken an entire year after Edmund's death. There is an NB at the end of the inventory, which was likely added when the case was decided just a month after the inventory was taken. Gabriel filed an additional estate account in July 1832 asking for a $400 adjustment to the original inventory due to Reason's obtaining freedom. SID's interpretation was that Reason was held in slavery until July 1832, but Marietta staff disagree. Reason would have been released with the rest of his family in May 1831, prior to Gabriel's 1832 account adjustment. Additionally, as a Supreme Court justice, Gabriel was unlikely to have disobeyed a Supreme Court ruling by continuing to hold Reason enslaved.

Description:	There was a District of Columbia death record for a Hezekiah Duckett, 45-year-old laborer residing at 312 Willow Alley Southwest. The listing recorded his death on September 2, 1891. It showed him buried in Graceland Cemetery on September 4, 1891.
Notes:	Slight difference in ages -- per the death record Hezekiah would have been born in 1846, but Hezekiah wasn't accounted for in Gabriel's 1844 estate. Per the 1880 census, Hezekiah would have been born in 1840. There is a 6 year gap in the ages given.

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Brown (born August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912) come through the ca. 1908 marriage of Calphus and Margaret's son William A. Brown to a woman named Louise.

Biographical Narrative: Rezin was an enslaved worker at Marietta. He was likely taken to Marietta between 1833-38 after being purchased by Gabriel Duvall. He was first identified by name in Gabriel's 1838 will, where Gabriel bequeathed Rezin to his grandson Edmund B. Duval, Jr. In his 1840 will, Gabriel again bequeathed Rezin to Edmund. After Gabriel's death in 1844, Edmund would have become Rezin's new enslaver. Although he doesn't appear by name in records after 1844, an individual matching Rezin's age, gender, and monetary "value" appears in Edmund's enslavements in 1850 and 1860. Thus, Rezin likely continued to live and labor at Marietta after Gabriel's death.

Biographical Narrative: Little is currently known about Richard other than that he was enslaved by Gabriel Duvall at Marietta. He was either born at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) or was purchased later by Gabriel Duvall. Gabriel's tax records since 1802 reflect individuals (names unknown) with the potential to match Richard's life trajectory at the Old Mansion/Wigwam and Marietta. Richard was first identified by name in Gabriel's 1833 Personal Property Tax record, where his assigned monetary "value" placed him as an adult male, likely between 14-45 years of age. Richard was not mentioned in Gabriel's 1838 will, so he may have died, been sold, or self-emancipated prior to 1838.

Biographical Narrative: Robert was enslaved by Gabriel Duvall at Marietta. He was either born at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) or was purchased later by Gabriel. Gabriel's tax records since 1802 reflect enslaved individuals (names unknown) with the potential to match Robert's life trajectory at the Old Mansion/Wigwam and Marietta. Robert was first identified by name in Gabriel's 1833 Personal Property Tax record, where his assigned monetary "value" placed him as an adult male, likely between 14-45 years of age. In his 1838 and 1840 wills, Gabriel bequeathed Robert to his granddaughter Mary Frances Duval Yeaton. Mary Frances was still a minor when Gabriel died in 1844 and her appointed guardian John Southgate would have handled any dealings with her enslaved individuals. Mary Frances lived in Virginia after Gabriel's death, and from 1847-49 she was taxed in the City of Norfolk, Virginia for one enslaved person over the age of 12 years, but not over the age of 16 years. This does not match the known description of Robert. Around 1850, Mary Frances married William C. Yeaton in Alexandria, VA. A prenuptial was created but did not include the mention of any enslaved people that were brought to the union by Mary Frances. In Alexandria, VA, in 1860, William C. Yeaton was the employer of two hired enslaved individuals listed as a "40-year-old Black female" and a "13-year-old Black male." It does not appear that those enslaved people that were inherited by Mary Frances Duval Yeaton were located in Alexandria at that time. Therefore, Robert may have stayed living and laboring at Marietta after Gabriel's death. It also does not appear that the Robert Brown (living with an Evaline Brown) identified by SID in the 1870 census for DC is Robert (GD1153) as Robert Brown was listed as being 45 years old.

SID research identified a family group with potential ties to Marietta enumerated in the 1870 census and living in the District of Columbia. The household consisted of:

Robert Brown, 45 yrs, male, black, at home, born in Maryland
 Evaline Brown, 35 yrs, female, black, keeping House, born in Maryland
 Robert Brown, 16 yrs, male, black, drives [a] cart, born in Maryland
 Walter Brown, 13 yrs, male, black, driver, born in Maryland
 Rosa Brown, 8 yrs, female, black, at home, born in Maryland
 Jane Brown, 22 yrs, female, black, in service, born in Maryland

SID states more research is necessary to confirm that this was Everlina (GD221) and Walter Brown (EBDjr83) due to potential discrepancies. SID also suggests that the Robert Brown listed in the same census might be Robert (GD1153).

Marietta Associated: ☒ Checking the "Marietta Associated" box means this individual was enslaved at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) OR at Marietta.

Name: Robin [Unknown] (BDjr19) Gender: Male Religion:

Date of Birth: ☒ 1738-69 Place of Birth:

Date of Death: ☐ Place of Death:

Race: Black Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Robin was likely born between 1738-69, but his freedom status at birth is unknown. Tax records for an enslaved individual (name unknown) whose description matched the life trajectory of Robin indicate he was enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr. at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) by 1783. The small scale of Benjamin Duvall, Jr.'s slaveholdings, as well as the age and gender markers of those enslaved recorded in Benjamin Duvall, Jr.'s tax records, has led SID to conclude that the majority of those enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr. were of a single-family unit that consisted of at least four children with their mother and father: Robin, his wife (likely Airey – BDjr18), and their 4 children, likely the following: Female (BDjr3), Female (BDjr4), Kate (BDjr26), Ruth (DD1). Information in a letter from Gabriel Duvall to his father Benjamin Duvall, Jr. indicates that Robin was a trusted enough by his enslavers to potentially travel alone between Gabriel Duvall's residence in Annapolis and his father's residence in the Old Mansion. The letter also mentions Holliday's Choice (Hollyday's Choice), although it's unclear whether Robin ever lived or worked there. In Benjamin Duvall Jr.'s 1794 will, he bequeathed to his wife several enslaved people, but Robin and his wife Airey were not included, because they were most likely designated to become enslaved by Gabriel Duvall. Gabriel Duvall was taxed for an enslaved individual matching Robin's description beginning in 1793, but the wording of Benjamin Duvall, Jr.'s will in 1794 indicates he was still the enslaver of Robin. By 1800, Robin was not found on any known record. It is unknown whether he had died, been sold or hired out, or had self-emancipated.

Enslaver Name	ca?	Enslavement Date	Notes
Duvall, Jr., Benjamin, 5/29/1719 to 1801 (BDjr)	<input type="checkbox"/>	1790 (possibly 1783)	Robin is first mentioned by name in 1790; however, Benjamin Duvall, Jr.'s tax records indicate an individual matching Robin's life trajectory at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) beginning in 1783.
Duvall, Gabriel, 12/6/1752 to 4/2/1844 (GD)	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	1793?	Although not mentioned by name, an individual matching Robin's life trajectory appeared in Gabriel Duvall's tax records beginning in 1793. However, when Benjamin Duvall, Jr. wrote his will in 1794, he indicated that he was still the enslaver of Robin, so it's unclear whether Gabriel was Robin's enslaver at this time.

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Robin was enslaved by Mareen Duvall at Middle Plantation in Anne Arundel County, MD, and appears in the 1694 appraisal of Mareen's estate after his death, with a monetary "value" of £27. Mareen did not bequeath any of his enslaved individuals to his son Benjamin Duvall, Sr., so Robin and his potential descendants likely had no ties to the Old Mansion/Wigwam or Marietta. Rather, some of Mareen's enslaved people were inherited by his widow Mary Duvall, who then married Colonel Henry Ridgely in 1695. The couple lived at Middle Plantation for a few years before moving to Catton Plantation in Prince George's County around 1700. In 1710, Ridgely died, and the inventory of his estate included a man named "Robbin" assigned a monetary "value" of £30. There is also an enslaved boy named "Robbin" listed, who may have been Robin's young son. Currently, there are no additional records related to Robin after 1710.

Biographical Narrative: Rose was enslaved by Gabriel Duvall at Marietta and was likely born into slavery around 1819-25. She was first identified by name in Gabriel's 1833 tax records. She next appeared in Gabriel's 1838 will, where he stated she should be inherited by his granddaughter Gabriella Augusta Duval. In 1840, Gabriel wrote a new will, bequeathing Rose instead to his grandson Edmund B. Duval, Jr. (who also inherited Marietta). Edmund became Rose's new enslaver after Gabriel's death in 1844. Although no records after the year 1844 mention Rose by name, an individual matching her age, gender, and monetary "value" appears in Edmund's enslavements in 1850 and 1860, so Rose may have continued to labor and reside at Marietta during that time.

Duvall, Gabriel, 12/6/1752 to 4/2/1844 (GD)	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	1833 (possibly 1819)	Rose was likely born into enslavement at Marietta. Gabriel Duvall's Personal Property Tax records reflect enslaved individuals (names unknown) with the potential to match Rose's gender, age, and life's trajectory since 1819.
Duval, Jr., Edmund Bryce, 3/20/1826 to 5/23/1878 (EBDjr)	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	1844	In his unrecorded 1838 will, Gabriel bequeathed Rose to his granddaughter, Gabriella Augusta Duval. In his recorded 1840 will, however, he bequeathed Rose to his grandson, Edmund. Edmund would have inherited Rose along with Marietta Plantation after Gabriel's death in 1844.

Biographical Narrative: Between the period 1783 and 1800, an enslaved individual matching Ruth's life trajectory appears in the tax assessments of Benjamin Duvall. If this is Ruth, she was born circa 1773. The small scale of Benjamin Duvall, Jr.'s slaveholdings, as well as the age and gender markers of those enslaved recorded in Benjamin Duvall, Jr.'s tax records, has led SID to conclude that the majority of those enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr. were of a single-family unit that consisted of at least four children with their mother and father: Airey (BDjr18), her husband (likely Robin - BDjr19), and their 4 children, likely the following: Kate (BDjr26), [Enslaved Female - Name Unknown] (BDjr3), [Enslaved Female - Name Unknown] (BDjr4), Ruth (DD1). We know Ruth had at least three children by 1794, and she is first mentioned by name in Benjamin Duvall's will of that year, which states "Ruth and her three children" [BDjr21 - name unknown, BDjr22 - name unknown, BDjr23 - Jane Black] and future children [DD12 - name unknown, DD6 - Moses Black, DD13 - name unknown; DD18 - name unknown] would be inherited by his daughter, Delilah Duvall. Ruth continued to be enslaved by Benjamin until his death in 1801, at which time her new enslaver became Delilah Duvall. Sarah continued living at the Old Mansion / Wigwam, where she was taxed for an enslaved individual matching Ruth's description for the years 1802-12. There are no known, available records pertaining to Ruth after the year 1812. Later records provide information about the possible children of Ruth found to be enslaved by Benjamin Duvall, Jr. and Delilah Duvall. Personal Property Tax records provided evidence of continuity in Delilah Duvall's enslavement of the individuals bequeathed to her from her father to later deeds of manumission written by Delilah Duvall to Moses Black and Jane Black.

Biographical Narrative: Sacose was enslaved by Mareen Duvall at Middle Plantation in Anne Arundel County, MD, and appears in the 1694 appraisal of Mareen's estate after his death with a monetary "value" of £28. Mareen did not bequeath any of his enslaved individuals to his son Benjamin Duvall, Sr., so Sacose and his potential descendants likely had no ties to the Old Mansion/Wigwam or Marietta. When Mareen's widow Mary Duvall remarried to Henry Ridgely, she took some of Mareen's enslaved individuals with her to Catton Plantation. Sacose does not appear in the 1710 inventory of Henry Ridgely's estate, however, so it's unclear whether Sacose went to Catton Plantation. He may have been sold, died, or self-emancipated prior to that date.

Biographical Narrative: Thomas Butler, his wife Sarah Butler, and their children Lydia, Jane, and Sally were enslaved by John Dells (or Dales) some time prior to 1799. Sally was born in Virginia ca. 1800-1805. At various times from 1799-1805, the Butler family lived with Dells in Maryland, Virginia, and the Georgetown neighborhood in Washington, D.C. Dells hired out Thomas and Sarah to Thomas Gossum in Virginia and to Christian Getzendanner in Georgetown. Around 1805 or earlier, Dells sold Thomas and Sarah's children Lydia and Jane away from the family. No record of their sale or their new enslaver has been located. According to witness Matthew Kennedy, in the spring of 1805, Dells and Duvall met in Gabriel's Washington City office and the sale of Thomas, Sarah, and Sally to Duvall was agreed upon. Then Duvall and Dells met at William Duvall's in Georgetown where the sale was finalized, Thomas and Sarah having agreed to the transfer. This would have occurred on May 29 or 30, 1805. Duvall sent Thomas, Sarah, and Sally to Prince George's County to work. This was prior to the building of Marietta, so the Butlers likely lived and labored at the Old Mansion at first. Prior to 1828, Thomas and Sarah had additional children named Matilda, Airy, and Reason. They also had two grandchildren named Liddy and Eliza. It is not clear which of their children was the parent of Liddy and Eliza.

Fearful that Duvall was planning to sell them, in 1828 all eight members of the Butler family petitioned the D.C. circuit court for their freedom. One of their attorneys was Francis Scott Key. The case centered around whether John Dells had imported the Butlers from Virginia or D.C. in 1805 with the intent to sell them, which would be a violation of the 1796 Maryland Act. Gabriel Duvall stated he did not intend to sell the Butlers and that the case should be tried in a Maryland court, perhaps believing he could obtain a more favorable verdict in his home state. The court declined to change the venue, and decided, in fact, that John Dells did violate the non-importation clause. The Butlers were granted their freedom in 1831.

In 1860, a "Sallie Butler" appears in the census for Washington, D.C. in the house of "Rezin" Butler. This is not the daughter of Thomas and Sarah Butler, as her age in the census is given as 19 years old. More research needs to be performed in the hopes of identifying the location of Sally Butler after the year 1831.

Duvall, Gabriel, 12/6/1752 to 4/2/1844 (GD)	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	5/29/1805	On 5/29/1805, Gabriel Duvall purchased Thomas, Sarah, and Sally. He sent them to live and work at the Old Mansion / Wigwam or on Marietta land before he began construction on Marietta's house. The multigenerational Butler family, headed by Thomas and Sarah, were foundational within Marietta's enslaved community, being some of the earliest people held there.
Dells, John (JoD)	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	before 1805	John Dells enslaved Thomas, his wife Sarah, and their daughters Lydia, Jane, and Sally. Court testimony indicates he was the enslaver of Thomas and Sarah at least since 1799. Sally was a young girl (birth date unknown) in 1805.

Biographical Narrative: Samson was enslaved by Mareen Duvall at Middle Plantation in Anne Arundel County, MD, and appears in the 1694 appraisal of Mareen's estate after his death. He was listed as a boy with a monetary "value" of £26. While some of Mareen's enslaved individuals were retained by his wife Mary, Samson was not. A 1695 account of Mareen's estate taken by his son John Duvall, Richard Snowden, and John Hammond, reveals that Samson was sold for £26 to a man named Leonard Wayman. This is likely the Leonard Wayman (b. prior to 1662 to d. 7/15/1721) who resided in All Hallows Parish, Anne Arundel County, MD. Prior to the sale of Samson in 1695, his enslaver might have been either Mary Duvall Ridgely Henderson (MDRH) or Lewis Duvall (who inherited the other 300 acres of Mareen's estate). There is no further record of Samson after 1695, but further research into his new enslaver Leonard Wayman might reveal more details about Samson's life.

Biographical Narrative: Thomas Butler, his wife Sarah Butler, and their children Lydia, Jane, and Sally were enslaved by John Dells (or Dales) some time prior to 1799. At various times from 1799-1805, the Butler family lived with Dells in Maryland, Virginia, and the Georgetown neighborhood in Washington, D.C. Dells hired out Thomas and Sarah to Thomas Gossum in Virginia and to Christian Getzendanner in Georgetown. Around 1805 or earlier, Dells sold Thomas and Sarah's children Lydia and Jane away from the family. No record of their sale and their new enslaver has been located. According to witness Matthew Kennedy, in the spring of 1805, Dells and Duvall met in Gabriel's Washington City office and the sale of Thomas, Sarah, and Sally to Duvall was agreed upon. Then Duvall and Dells met at William Duvall's in Georgetown where the sale was finalized, Thomas and Sarah having agreed to the transfer. This would have occurred on May 29 or 30, 1805. Duvall sent Thomas, Sarah, and Sally to Prince George's County to work. This was prior to the building of Marietta, so the Butlers likely lived and labored at the Old Mansion at first. Prior to 1828, Thomas and Sarah had additional children named Matilda, Airy, and Reason. They also had two grandchildren named Liddy and Eliza. It is not clear which of their children was the parent of Liddy and Eliza.

Fearful that Duvall was planning to sell them, in 1828 all eight members of the Butler family petitioned the D.C. circuit court for their freedom. One of their attorneys was Francis Scott Key. The case centered around whether John Dells had imported the Butlers from Virginia or D.C. in 1805 with the intent to sell them, which would be a violation of the 1796 Maryland Act. Gabriel Duvall stated he did not intend to sell the Butlers and that the case should be tried in a Maryland court, perhaps believing he could obtain a more favorable verdict in his home state. The court declined to change the venue, and decided, in fact, that John Dells did violate the non-importation clause. The Butlers were granted their freedom in 1831.

NOTE: In 1860, a 40-year-old man named "Rezin Butler" (born in Virginia) was enumerated as a free man and head of his household in Washington, D.C. In the same household was a Sarah Butler, aged 99. SID believes these people are Reason (GD310) and Sarah (GD307). However, Reason was most likely born in Maryland and Sarah couldn't have been 59 years old when she gave birth to him. SID cites enumerator errors, but unless further information is found, it is the Marietta staff's belief that the people on this census are not Reason (GD310) and Sarah (GD307).

Name: Sarah Jane [Unknown] (GD244)

Gender: Female

Religion:

Date of Birth: ☒ ca? 1843

Place of Birth: likely at Marietta, Prince George's County, MD

Date of Death: ☐

Place of Death:

Race:

Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Sarah Jane first appears by name in the 1844 inventory of Gabriel Duvall's estate. She and her mother Amelia are assessed together, indicating that Sarah Jane was very young at the time (likely born around 1843-44). Amelia first appears by name in Gabriel's 1833 tax records, thus Sarah Jane would have been born into slavery at Marietta. Based upon the order of names and organization of individuals according to their age and assessed monetary "values" in the 1844 inventory, it is likely that William Thomas was also a child of Amelia. Therefore, William Thomas would have been Sarah Jane's brother. Their mother Amelia was bequeathed to Gabriel's grandson Edmund B. Duval, Jr. per Gabriel's 1840 will and, as children of Amelia, William Thomas and Sarah Jane would have been enslaved by Edmund as well. After 1844, no individuals matching Sarah Jane's or Amelia's age, gender and monetary "value" can be identified. It is possible that Amelia and Sarah Jane were either sold, died, self-emancipated, or had been hired out. There are no known, available records pertaining to Sarah Jane by name after the year 1844.

Biographical Narrative: Sary was enslaved by Mareen Duvall at Middle Plantation in Anne Arundel County, MD, and appears in the 1694 appraisal of Mareen's estate after his death, with a monetary "value" of £10. She was likely a young girl and may have been the offspring of one of Mareen Duvall's enslaved females. Mareen did not bequeath any of his enslaved individuals to his son Benjamin Duvall, Sr., so Sary and her potential descendants likely had no ties to the Old Mansion/Wigwam or Marietta. Rather, some of Mareen's enslaved people were inherited by his widow Mary Duvall, who then married Colonel Henry Ridgely in 1695. The couple lived at Middle Plantation for a few years before moving to Catton Plantation in Prince George's County around 1700. In 1710, Ridgely died, and the inventory of his estate included a woman named Sarah "valued" at £28. It's possible that Sarah and Sary are the same individual, but there is no proof of this. There is no further record of Sary after this date.

Name: Seneca Jackson (EBDsr7) Gender: Male Religion:

Date of Birth: ☐ ca? 3/1/1819 Place of Birth:

Date of Death: ☐ Place of Death:

Race: Black Ethnicity:

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Seneca Jackson was born to Serena on March 1, 1819. Both Seneca and his mother were enslaved by Edmund B. Duval, Sr., although the date of their enslavement is unknown. Other family members enslaved by the Duvalls include Seneca's siblings (Serena's other children): Rachel, Edward, Cary, Amelia, and Randolph. Seneca also had a niece named Emily, who was Rachel's daughter. The first documentation of Seneca is in an April 16, 1831 estate inventory of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. taken after his death, where Seneca is listed as an enslaved 11-year-old boy. After Edmund's death, his wife Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval selected Seneca's mother Serena (and two other individuals) as part of her dower's thirds, becoming Serena's new enslaver. Seneca and the remaining enslaved individuals not selected by Augusta were inherited by Edmund and Augusta's four children equally. Therefore, Marcus Duval, Edmund B. Duval, Jr., Mary Frances Duval, and Gabriella Augusta Duval became Seneca's new enslavers in 1831. After the death of their mother Augusta in 1832, their grandfather Gabriel Duvall acted as the orphaned children's guardian and managed the financial affairs of their estate, and the lives of those they enslaved, until his grandchildren reached their majority. Gabriel hired out his grandchildren's enslaved individuals, including Seneca, and used their labor at Marietta. He compensated the heirs' estate for their use. In 1831 and 1832, Seneca is believed to have "worked in the crops, as usual, to support the family of the deceased." Gabriel recorded the use of Seneca's labor at Marietta from 1833-37. In June of 1837, Seneca decided to self-emancipate and left Marietta. Unfortunately, he was soon captured and re-enslaved on June 20, 1837. He was imprisoned in the Baltimore City Jail until June 22, 1837, when he was released into the custody of well-known Baltimore slave trader and slave jailer Hope Slatter. Gabriel Duvall notes that Seneca "was taken up & sold for $450," perhaps to Slatter, whose business was enslaving men, women, and children and marching them in coffles or sending them via ship to be re-sold in the deep South. Further research on Seneca and his potential enslavement by Slatter is warranted. As of now, there are no known records pertaining to Seneca after the year 1837.

Description: In June of 1837, Gabriel Duvall recorded: "Seneca having run away; he was taken up + sold for $450. The reward $100, and jail fees etc. amount to $106.73 - leaving $343.27 the net balance to be accounted for to the children: each $85.82."

Notes: Seneca was likely sold in Baltimore, perhaps to Hope Slatter, without returning to Marietta. During the course of the project, Marietta House Museum had shared information regarding Hope H. Slatter. Slavery Inventory Database checked available slave ship manifests associated with Hope H. Slatter on known, available electronic databases. These records did not provide evidence of Seneca Jackson having been transported to New Orleans around the time of his arrest. Further research is warranted.

Additional Information

Edmund B. Duval, Sr. died intestate in 1831. The administration of Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s estate fell to his father, Gabriel Duvall. By law, Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s widow, Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, inherited her chosen one-third (her dower) of his enslaved persons. Augusta C. McCausland Duval died in October of 1832. At that time, the enslaved of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. and Augusta C. McCausland Duval were bequeathed to their four living children: Marcus Du Val, Edmund B. Duval, Jr., Mary Frances Duval, Gabriella Augusta Duval. Gabriel Duvall, grandfather of the said four heirs, was the manager and guardian of all their inherited enslaved persons until the four heirs reached their majorities. Documentation of Gabriel Duvall's personal accounts for the grandchildren survived and provided a fuller account of this group of enslaved individuals. Although there is evidence of enslaved ownership by Edmund B. Duval, Sr. that dated back to 1818, our only current understanding of the specifically named enslaved individuals of his estate is from 1831. We have no information at this time of their origins prior to their enslavement by Edmund B. Duval, Sr.

Currently, we have found no record of the enslaved of Marietta having come from the family of Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval. Augusta's father, Marcus McCausland, was recorded on the 1820 U.S. Federal Census as having five enslaved individuals in Baltimore County, Maryland. Marcus McCausland died in 1828 leaving everything to his wife and executrix, Mary Ann McCausland. The inventory of Marcus McCausland's estate recorded no enslaved. Mary Ann McCausland was recorded with no enslaved on the 1830 U.S. Federal Census. We have currently found no record of the whereabouts of those five enslaved individuals that were enumerated in 1820. No deed of purchase or deed of gift transferring ownership of an enslaved individual from the McCauslands to the Duvals was located.

Biographical Narrative: Serena Jackson was born in the summer of 1800, but there are no current records indicating where she was born and whether she was born enslaved. The first documentation of Serena is in an April 16, 1831 estate inventory of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. taken after his death, where Serena is listed as an enslaved 30-year-old woman. There is no indication of the date of her enslavement by Edmund. After Edmund's death, Serena's new enslaver was his wife Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, who inherited Serena as part of her dower's thirds. Augusta died the year after her husband on October 7, 1832. The inventory of Augusta's estate lists Serena as 32 years old and assigned her a monetary "value" of $250. Augusta bequeathed Serena and her future children to her daughter, Mary Frances Duval. Although Serena was never referred to as Serena "Jackson," she potentially shared the same last name as those believed to have been her children: Rachel [Jackson], born December 8, 1817; Seneca Jackson, born March 1, 1819; Edward Jackson, born July 1827; Cary [Jackson], born September 1830; Amelia [Jackson], born March 2, 1833; Randolph Jackson, born September 15, 1834. Amelia and Randolph were both born at Marietta. Mary Frances's grandfather Gabriel Duval managed Mary Frances's estate until she attained her majority. So, although Serena and her children were technically enslaved by Mary Frances, Gabriel hired their labor at Marietta and paid his granddaughter for their use. In 1833, Gabriel's account book notes that Serena remained in the kitchen in 1832 to take care of her young children. She next appears in the account book as hired by Gabriel for the years 1838-42. In 1838, Gabriel recorded Serena's labor as equal only to the maintenance of her four children. In 1839-42, he recorded her labor as equal to the maintenance of her three children, plus $12.00. It's assumed that Serena would have been fully enslaved by Mary Frances after the latter reached her majority, but no records have been located showing Serena living with Mary Frances. During 1847-49, Mary Frances was taxed in the city of Norfolk, Virginia for one enslaved person over the age of 12 years, but not over the age of 16 years, so this could not be Serena. No records have been located recording Serena either at Marietta or in Virginia with Mary Frances after 1842.

Additional Information

Edmund B. Duval, Sr. died intestate in 1831. The administration of Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s estate fell to his father, Gabriel Duvall. By law, Edmund B. Duval, Sr.'s widow, Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval, inherited her chosen one-third (her dower) of his enslaved persons. Augusta C. McCausland Duval died in October of 1832. At that time, the enslaved of Edmund B. Duval, Sr. and Augusta C. McCausland Duval were bequeathed to their four living children: Marcus Du Val, Edmund B. Duval, Jr., Mary Frances Duval, Gabriella Augusta Duval. Gabriel Duvall, grandfather of the said four heirs, was the manager and guardian of all their inherited enslaved persons until the four heirs reached their majorities. Documentation of Gabriel Duvall's personal accounts for the grandchildren survived and provided a fuller account of this group of enslaved individuals. Although there is evidence of enslaved ownership by Edmund B. Duval, Sr. that dated back to 1818, our only current understanding of the specifically named enslaved individuals of his estate is from 1831. We have no information at this time of their origins prior to their enslavement by Edmund B. Duval, Sr.

Currently, we have found no record of the enslaved of Marietta having come from the family of Augusta Caroline McCausland Duval. Augusta's father, Marcus McCausland, was recorded on the 1820 U.S. Federal Census as having five enslaved individuals in Baltimore County, Maryland. Marcus McCausland died in 1828 leaving everything to his wife and executrix, Mary Ann McCausland. The inventory of Marcus McCausland's estate recorded no enslaved. Mary Ann McCausland was recorded with no enslaved on the 1830 U.S. Federal Census. We have currently found no record of the whereabouts of those five enslaved individuals that were enumerated in 1820. No deed of purchase or deed of gift transferring ownership of an enslaved individual from the McCauslands to the Duvals was located.

Biographical Narrative: Simon was enslaved by Mareen Duvall at Middle Plantation in Anne Arundel County, MD, and appears in the 1694 appraisal of Mareen's estate after his death as a "boy" with a monetary "value" of £26. Mareen did not bequeath any of his enslaved individuals to his son Benjamin Duvall, Sr., so Simon and his potential descendants likely had no ties to the Old Mansion/Wigwam or Marietta. When Mareen's widow Mary Duvall remarried to Henry Ridgely, she took some of Mareen's enslaved individuals with her to Catton Plantation. Simon does not appear in the 1710 inventory of Henry Ridgely's estate, however, so it's unclear whether Simon went to Catton Plantation. He may have been sold, died, or self-emancipated prior to that date.

Biographical Narrative: On August 1, 1801, Stephen, along with a 45-year-old enslaved man named Jeffry (GD29), was mortgaged for £78 to Gabriel Duvall by his presumed owner, Walter Wyvill Norman of Anne Arundel County. The mortgage was not recorded, however, and it's not known whether Norman paid the mortgage before its due date of November 10, 1801. Therefore, it remains unclear whether Gabriel Duvall officially became Stephen's enslaver. He is listed as a possible enslaver. Stephen does not appear on Gabriel's 1833 Personal Property tax list that identified all enslaved people by first name. If he was enslaved by Gabriel, he was either sold, dead, or had self-emancipated prior to 1833.

The mortgage was to be canceled if Norman paid Duvall, on or before November 10, 1801, the said £78 with legal interest and deed recording costs. Biographical Narrative: Thomas Butler, his wife Sarah Butler, and their children Lydia, Jane, and Sally were enslaved by John Dells (or Dales) some time prior to 1799. At various times from 1799-1805, the Butler family lived with Dells in Maryland, Virginia, and the Georgetown neighborhood in Washington, D.C. Dells hired out Thomas and Sarah to Thomas Gossum in Virginia and to Christian Getzendanner in Georgetown. Around 1805 or earlier, Dells sold Thomas and Sarah's children Lydia and Jane away from the family. No record of their sale and their new enslaver has been located. According to witness Matthew Kennedy, in the spring of 1805, Dells and Duvall met in Gabriel's Washington City office and the sale of Thomas, Sarah, and Sally to Duvall was agreed upon. Then Duvall and Dells met at William Duvall's in Georgetown where the sale was finalized, Thomas and Sarah having agreed to the transfer. This would have occurred on May 29 or 30, 1805. Duvall sent Thomas, Sarah, and Sally to Prince George's County to work. This was prior to the building of Marietta, so the Butlers likely lived and labored at the Old Mansion at first. Prior to 1828, Thomas and Sarah had additional children named Matilda, Airy, and Reason. They also had two grandchildren named Liddy and Eliza. It is not clear which of their children was the parent of Liddy and Eliza.

Fearful that Duvall was planning to sell them, in 1828 all eight members of the Butler family petitioned the D.C. circuit court for their freedom. One of their attorneys was Francis Scott Key. The case centered around whether John Dells had imported the Butlers from Virginia or D.C. in 1805 with the intent to sell them, which would be a violation of the 1796 Maryland Act. Gabriel Duvall stated he did not intend to sell the Butlers and that the case should be tried in a Maryland court, perhaps believing he could obtain a more favorable verdict in his home state. The court declined to change the venue, and decided, in fact, that John Dells did violate the non-importation clause. The Butlers were granted their freedom in 1831. There are no known, available records pertaining to Thomas Butler after the year 1831.

Biographical Narrative: Toby was enslaved by Mareen Duvall at Middle Plantation in Anne Arundel County, MD, and appears in the 1694 appraisal of Mareen's estate after his death, with a monetary "value" of £27. Mareen did not bequeath any of his enslaved individuals to his son Benjamin Duvall, Sr., so Toby and his potential descendants likely had no ties to the Old Mansion/Wigwam or Marietta. Rather, some of Mareen's enslaved people were inherited by his widow Mary Duvall, who then married Colonel Henry Ridgely in 1695. The couple lived at Middle Plantation for a few years before moving to Catton Plantation in Prince George's County around 1700. In 1710, Ridgely died, and the inventory of his estate included a man named Toby "valued" at £30. Additionally, there is a heading for "Toby's Quarter" on the inventory, revealing Toby was in charge of some of Ridgely's land located away from the main plantation. Living and working at these quarters, he managed 36 head of cattle and 6 horses. Away from his enslaver, Toby would have had some independence, made decisions about the organization of work and the maintenance and discipline of other enslaved people there, and some responsibility for the farm's success. The presence of two beds, six bowls, and a spinning wheel, indicate he was not alone at the quarters, and that women were likely present, perhaps family members. The inventory also lists an enslaved boy named Toby, who may have been Toby's son. Currently, there are no additional records related to Toby after 1710.

Biographical Narrative: What we know about Tom comes from a July 31, 1837 newspaper notice placed by Gabriel Duvall. Gabriel was the enslaver of Tom's brother Joe, who had self-emancipated from Marietta on July 25, 1837. In the newspaper notice, Gabriel states that Joe had two brothers: Tom and Phil. Sometime before 1837, Tom was enslaved by a Mr. Ritchie of Frederick, Maryland. Ritchie died, although no date is given for his death, and apparently Tom was residing in Baltimore as a free man by 1837. It's possible that upon his death, Ritchie freed Tom. No other information about Tom is given in the newspaper notice.

Description: Tom's brother Joe self-emancipates:

"One Hundred and Fifty Dollars Reward. Ranaway on Tuesday last, from my farm in Prince George's county, a negro [sic] slave named JOE, aged 39 years, almost five feet ten inches high. His complexion is dark, not black, stammers in conversation, and stoops a little. He had on and took with him a great coat of drab colored course cloth, two short coats of country cloth, kersey of a light color, pantaloons of the same, and some other clothing. He has a brother named Tom, who belonged to Mr. Ritchie, of Frederick, since deceased; another brother named Phil, who belonged to Mr. Kennedy, of Baltimore. Tom, it has been said, now resides in Baltimore; he is a free man. Joe will probably go to Frederick or Baltimore. The above reward will be promptly paid to any person who will take him up and deliver him to me, or confine him in jail so that I get him again. G. DUVALL."

Biographical Narrative: Little is currently known about Tom other than that he was enslaved by Gabriel Duvall at Marietta. He was either born at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) or was purchased later by Gabriel Duvall. Gabriel's tax records since 1802 do reflect individuals (names unknown) who might match Tom's life trajectory at the Old Mansion/Wigwam and Marietta. Tom was first identified by name in Gabriel's 1833 Personal Property Tax record, where he was listed as an adult male, likely between the ages of 14-45. Tom was not mentioned in Gabriel's 1838 will, so he may have died, been sold, or self-emancipated prior to 1838.

Biographical Narrative: Tony was enslaved by Mareen Duvall at Middle Plantation in Anne Arundel County, MD, and appears in the 1694 appraisal of Mareen's estate after his death. He was listed as a man with a monetary "value" of £27. While some of Mareen's enslaved individuals were retained by his wife Mary, Tony was not. A 1695 account of Mareen's estate taken by his son John Duvall, Richard Snowden, and John Hammond, reveals that Tony was sold for £27 to a man named Richard Snowden, Sr. This is likely the Richard Snowden (b. ca. 1640 to d. 5/20/1711) who immigrated to Maryland around 1659. Prior to the sale of Tony in 1695, his enslaver might have been either Mary Duvall Ridgely Henderson (MDRH) or Lewis Duvall (who inherited the other 300 acres of Mareen's estate). There is no further record of Tony after 1695, but further research into his new enslaver Richard Snowden, Sr. might reveal more details about Tony's life.

Biographical Narrative: Trueman Lee was enslaved by Gabriel Duvall at Marietta. He was either born at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) or was purchased later by Gabriel Duvall. Gabriel's tax records since 1802 reflect individuals (names unknown) with the potential to match Trueman's life trajectory at the Old Mansion/Wigwam and Marietta. Trueman was first identified by name in Gabriel's 1833 Personal Property Tax record, where his assigned monetary "value" placed him as an adult male, likely between 14-45 years of age. In both his 1838 and 1840 wills, Gabriel bequeathed Trueman to his grandson Edmund B. Duval, Jr. After Gabriel's 1844 death, Trueman continued to live and labor at Marietta with Edmund as his new enslaver. An individual matching Trueman's age, gender, and monetary "value" appears in Edmund's enslaved holdings in 1850, but not in 1860. It is possible that Trueman was hired out in 1860. On July 12, 1864, a newspaper article about Trueman Lee being drafted into the United States Colored Troops (USCT) indicates he was still enslaved and his enslaver was "Edward" B. Duvall. No Edward B. Duvall lived in Prince George's County in 1860, so we can interpret this as Edmund B. Duval. Currently, no postbellum records have been discovered for Trueman. Further research would be warranted.

Description: In July of 1864, an article in The Baltimore Sun named the 660 persons from Prince George's County, Maryland drafted into the Union Army. Of these draftees, 332 were (and according to Maryland State law, legally still) enslaved individuals. These enslaved and Free men of color would have been drafted into the United States Colored Troops (USCT). From the First Election District in Prince George's County, of which Marietta was part, a "Trueman Lee," enslaved man of Edward B. Duvall, was reported as having been drafted. The article identified an "Edward" B. Duvall, as the enslaver. We believe that the paper is referring to Edmund B. Duval, Jr. as there is no Edward B. Duvall that lived in Prince George's County, MD in 1860. This information seems to confirm that Edmund B. Duval, Jr. had been Trueman Lee's enslaver.
Notes: More research needs to be conducted to determine whether enslaved individuals were granted freedom upon performing military service, or whether they were still enslaved.

Physical Characteristics:

Biographical Narrative: Walter Brown was likely the child of Everlina (who was enslaved by Gabriel Duvall and Edmund B. Duval, Jr.). Everlina also had a son named Calphus Brown (born ca. 1843-44) and likely a daughter named Maria (born ca. 1840), both of whom were likely Walter's siblings. If Walter is the child of Everlina, then he would have been born into enslavement at Marietta. On October 20, 1862, Walter Brown was sold by Edmund B. Duval, Jr. to his neighbor Dr. William W. Duvall, son of Dr. Charles Duvall. Both Duvalls were direct descendants of Mareen Duvall. The deed of sale stated "... in consideration of the sum of two hundred and thirty dollars (through professional services) lawful money [...] by Dr. W. W. Duvall [...] grant + convey unto the said party of the second part [...] a servant boy known as Walter Brown, now in the employ of J. R. Carrick and a pair of red oxen [...]." Dr. W. W. Duvall was also the neighbor of John R. Carrick. This was the only record located in the antebellum period that identified Walter Brown by name. The record provided incredible insight into the daily existence of enslaved individuals, their movement within the hiring system, and movement within the neighboring white community. Walter Brown was sold while hired out. The record illustrated how, under slavery, life altering transactions could be performed without the knowledge or consent of the affected enslaved person. When Walter Brown was sold, he was employed by John R. Carrick, also a Marietta neighbor. The closeness and proximity of the white slaveholding families had a huge impact on the lives, relationships and community of enslaved people.

SID research identified an "Evaline Brown" enumerated in the 1870 census and living in the District of Columbia with a family group of other individuals with potential ties to Marietta. The household consisted of:

Robert Brown, 45 yrs, male, black, at home, born in Maryland
 Evaline Brown, 35 yrs, female, black, keeping House, born in Maryland
 Robert Brown, 16 yrs, male, black, drives [a] cart, born in Maryland
 Walter Brown, 13 yrs, male, black, driver, born in Maryland
 Rosa Brown, 8 yrs, female, black, at home, born in Maryland
 Jane Brown, 22 yrs, female, black, in service, born in Maryland

SID states more research is necessary to confirm that this was Everlina (GD221) and Walter Brown (EBDjr83) due to potential discrepancies. SID also suggests that the Robert Brown listed in the same census might be Robert (GD1153).

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Brown (born August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912) come through the ca. 1908 marriage of Calphus and Margaret's son William A. Brown to a woman named Louise (Lizie).

Biographical Narrative: Little is currently known about Washington other than that he was enslaved by Gabriel Duvall at Marietta. He was either born at the Old Mansion/Wigwam (aka Darnall's Grove) or was purchased later by Gabriel Duvall. Gabriel's tax records since 1802 reflect individuals (names unknown) with the potential to match Washington's life trajectory at the Old Mansion/Wigwam and Marietta. Washington was first identified by name in Gabriel's 1833 Personal Property Tax record, where his assigned monetary "value" placed him as an adult male, likely between 14-45 years of age. Washington was not mentioned in Gabriel's 1838 will, so he may have died, been sold, or self-emancipated prior to 1838.

Biographical Narrative: Harry (aka Henry) Wallace's wife (name unknown) was enslaved by a Mr. Baldwin, likely Thomas Baldwin, a local tavern owner. From the late 1700s into the early 1800s, Thomas Baldwin operated a tavern at the intersection of Rt. 450 and Enterprise Road, by the Old Mansion and what would become Marietta. Harry was enslaved by Gabriel Duvall, and he self-emancipated on April 4, 1801. In an effort to re-enslave Harry, Gabriel placed notices in Easton, Maryland's "Herald and Eastern Shore Intelligencer." These notices state that Harry's wife had recently stolen 15 or 20 dollars from Mrs. Baldwin, a portion of which was discovered in Harry's possession, and this prompted him to self-emancipate. There is no further information related to either Harry or his wife at this time.

Description: "Thirty Dollars Reward. Ran away from the subscriber's plantation near Mr. Baldwin's tavern, in Prince-George's county, on Saturday last, a likely young negro [sic] fellow named HARRY: he sometimes calls himself Henry Wallace. He is a likely black smooth faced young man, about 23 years of age, about 5 feet 2 inches high, straight and well made, He speaks in a slow and careless manner, sometimes hesitates, and when alarmed, stammers, and when made angry, his eyes have a redish cast. He had on and took with him a coarse felt hat, half worn, & rather high crowned, a dy'd cotton great coat almost new, with metal buttons a coarse dark colored jacket with full cape, and large metal buttons, three oznabrig shirts, a white gingham coat, green kersey overalls, having a small patch on the left knee; several waistcoats, one of which is a swandown, and a pair of short stockings. He is smart and active, can wrestle, box, beat a drum, sing and dance very well. His wife, the property of Mr. Baldwin, has been lately detected in stealing 15 or 20 dollars from her mistress, a part of which was found on Harry, and he fearing the consequences, made his escape. As it is probable he is not without cash, he may change his cloths; and it is likely he will change his name. He was born in Queen Ann's county, in the family of the late Richard B. Lloyd, Esq. and has a brother and other relations there. Whoever will apprehend Harry and secure him in gaol or otherwise, so that I may get him again, shall receive a reward of Thirty Dollars. All matters of vessels are cautioned against carrying him away. Gabriel Duvall. April 9, 1801."

Notes: Although Harry left on April 4, 1801, the notice first appeared in the May 12, 1801 (and subsequent) editions of this newspaper until September 8, 1801.

Biographical Narrative: Will was enslaved by Mareen Duvall at Middle Plantation in Anne Arundel County, MD, and appears in the 1694 appraisal of Mareen's estate after his death with a monetary "value" of £27. Mareen did not bequeath any of his enslaved individuals to his son Benjamin Duvall, Sr., so Will and his potential descendants likely had no ties to the Old Mansion/Wigwam or Marietta. When Mareen's widow Mary Duvall remarried to Henry Ridgely, she took some of Mareen's enslaved individuals with her to Catton Plantation. Will does not appear in the 1710 inventory of Henry Ridgely's estate, however, so it's unclear whether Will went to Catton Plantation. He may have been sold, died, or self-emancipated prior to that date.

Biographical Narrative: Will and his mother Agness were both enslaved by Gabriel Duvall at Marietta. Agness appears by name in Gabriel's 1838 and 1840 wills, but there is no mention of Will at that time. Will (an infant) first appears by name in the 1844 assessment of Gabriel's estate after his April 2, 1844 death. Agness and Will were given a monetary "value" of $150, which seems low for both individuals. The assessment of Will with his mother points to his very young age in 1844. Gabriel's 1840 will bequeaths Agness and any of her future children to his grandson Marcus Duval, thus Marcus became Agness and Will's new enslaver around April 2, 1844. When Marcus became of age, he would likely have moved Will from Marietta to his plantation at the Old Mansion / Wigwam. In the 1850 and 1860 census, an individual (name unknown) matching Will's age, gender, and monetary "value" can be identified in the enslaved holdings for Marcus Duval at Wigwam. Biographical Narrative: William Thomas first appears by name in the 1844 inventory of Gabriel's estate and, based on the order of names and organization of individuals according to their age and assessed monetary "values," it is likely that William Thomas was a child of Amelia. Amelia first appears by name in Gabriel's 1833 tax records, thus William Thomas likely would have been born into slavery at Marietta. Since he is not mentioned by name in Gabriel's 1840 will, he would likely have been born between 1840-44. Amelia and her daughter Sarah Jane are assessed together in the 1844 inventory, indicating that William Thomas had a very young sister. Amelia was bequeathed to Gabriel's grandson Edmund B. Duval, Jr. per Gabriel's 1840 will and, as children of Amelia, William Thomas and Sarah Jane would have been enslaved by Edmund as well. There are no known, available records pertaining to William Thomas by name after the year 1844. However, from 1844-60, individuals matching his age, gender, and monetary "value," can be identified in the enslaved holdings of Edmund B. Duval, Jr.

Enslaver Name	ca?	Enslavement Date	Notes
Duvall, Gabriel, 12/6/1752 to 4/2/1844 (GD)	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	1840-44	William Thomas is identified by name in Gabriel Duvall's 1844 inventory, but not in Gabriel's 1840 will. He may have been born enslaved between 1840-44, likely to Amelia (also enslaved at Marietta).
Duval, Jr., Edmund Bryce, 3/20/1826 to 5/23/1878 (EBDjr)	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	1844	As William Thomas's mother was likely Amelia, and she was bequeathed to Gabriel's grandson Edmund upon Gabriel's death in 1844, Edmund would also have been William Thomas's enslaver.

Relation Name	Certainty	Relationship Type	Notes
Amelia [Unknown], ca.1819-25 to ? (GD1168)	Likely	Parent	Based on the order of names and organization of individuals according to their age and assessed monetary "values" in Gabriel Duvall's 1844 estate inventory, it is likely that William Thomas was a child of Amelia.
Sarah Jane [Unknown], ca.1843 to ? (GD244)	Likely	Sibling	Sarah Jane was the daughter of Amelia, thus likely she was William Thomas's sister.

Description:	Possibly enslaved by Edmund B. Duval, Jr.: After 1844, individuals matching William Thomas's age, gender, and monetary "value" could be identified in the enslavements of Edmund B. Duval, Jr.
Bequest	Enslaved	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	1844	<input type="checkbox"/>		Marietta
Description:	If William Thomas was the child of Amelia and was born after the writing of Gabriel Duvall's 1840 will, said William Thomas would legally also be held in bondage by his mother's enslaver Edmund B. Duval, Jr.
Assessed	Enslaved	<input type="checkbox"/>	4/9/1844	<input type="checkbox"/>		Marietta
Description:	William Thomas was identified by name for the first time in the 1844 inventory of Gabriel Duvall's estate. He was given a monetary "value" of $100.00.

Additional Information

The Ducketts relate to the Brown family through marriage. Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165) are the progenitors of the Duckett family, and Everlina (GD221) is the progenitor of the Brown family. Jacob and Amelia's children were: Elizabeth Duckett (GD1171), Martha Duckett (GD1172), Benjamin Duckett (GD1157), Eley Duckett (GD230), Isaiah Duckett (GD207), Elias Duckett (GD196), Jane Duckett (GD233), Hezekiah Duckett (GD234), Margaret Ann Duckett (GD226). Everlina's children were: Calphus Brown (GD222), Maria (GD223), and Walter Brown (EBDjr83). Margaret Ann Duckett married Everlina's son Calphus Brown. Calphus and Margaret's children William Brown (WBFree) and Elias Brown (EBFree) are the grandchildren of Jacob Duckett, Amelia Duckett, and Everlina. Other grandchildren of Jacob and Amelia Duckett include those of their son Hezekiah Duckett who married Rebecca (RD), born circa 1845. The couple's children were Eliza Duckett (EzDFree), born ca. 1867; Edward Duckett (EwDFree), born ca. 1873; Joseph Duckett (JDFree), born ca. 1876. Jacob and Amelia's great-grandchildren Mabel E. Brown (born August 1909) and William Brown (born ca. 1912) come through the ca. 1908 marriage of Calphus and Margaret's son William A. Brown to a woman named Louise (Lizie).

Biographical Narrative: William Brown was born in 1868 to Margaret Ann Duckett and Calphus Brown, who were both previously enslaved by Duvall family members. William was likely born in the District of Columbia, although census records also indicate he was born in Maryland. As Margaret Ann was listed as a widow by 1880, William's father Calphus died prior to that time. William is enumerated in the 1880 census as living in Washington, D.C. with his mother, brother Elias, and grandparents Jacob Duckett (GD1151) and Amelia Duckett (GD1165). William next appears in the 1900 census living in Washington, D.C. with his mother at the home of Margaret's brother-in-law Reason Brown. By 1910 William had married a woman named Louise (Lizie) and they had a daughter named Mabel E. Brown. The family still lived with Margaret, but they were no longer at Reason Brown's home. By 1920, William, Louise, Mabel, and Margaret were still living together, along with a new child also named William. Further research might determine what happened to William and his family after 1920.
